OUR ANNUAL THRIFT SALE

Friday and Saturday, April 14th and 15th

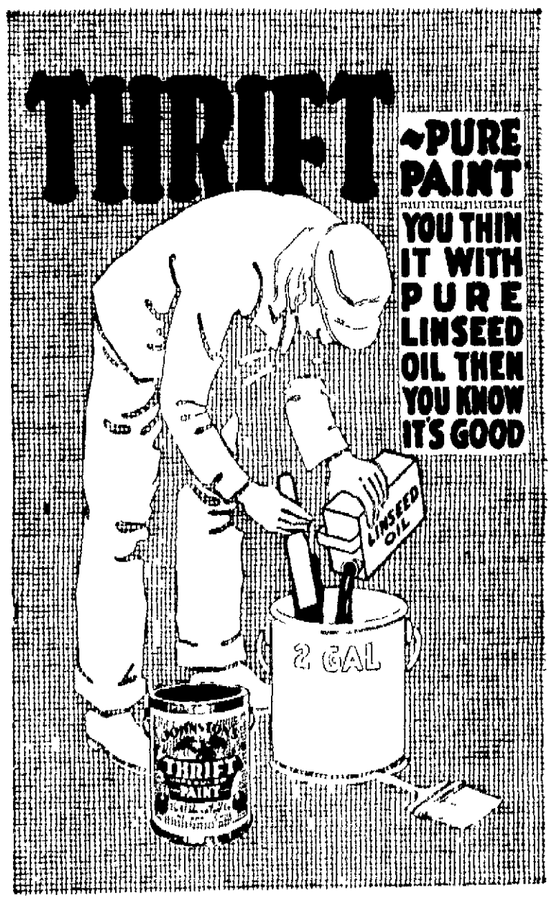
On These Two Days We Will Sell you One Gallon of Thrift Unreduced Paint and One Gallon of Pure Linseed Oil for $5

On the two days above mentioned the manufacturers of Thift Unreduced Paint allow us a special price concession, and we are passing this saving on to our customers.

Friday and Saturday we will take your order for Thrift Paint and Oil. Just give us your specifications and make a deposit of 25% of the total cost. We will then hold your order subject to delivery any time within sixty days.

We guarantee you further, that if there should be any decline in price (which we do not at this time expect) before the delivery of your order, we will give you the advantage of same.

One gallon of Thrift Unreduced Paint and one gallon of pure linseed oil means that will you will have two gallons of the best and heaviest ready mixed paint possible to make and of a consistency that will stand considerable further thinning for the first coat work, in fact from one and one-half to two gallons of oil can be added to each gallon of Thrift Unreduced Paint for the first or priming coat. The more pure linseed oil you can use not only makes a better paint but also reduces the cost.



The economy of Thrift Paint is evidenced by savings – below enumerated —and they quickly appeal to the dealer, painter and consumer when they become conversant with them. As you know there are many items which make up the cost of any material. In Thrift Paint we save for the following reasons, and for these reasons can and do give you better value for the money expended than you can secure in any other paint—

Thrift Paint being in unreduced form, we use one container where two ordinarily are required.

We save in grinding and mixing because we are only grinding and mixing one instead of two gallons.

We save in the boxes and the freight, as we are only shipping one instead of two gallons.

Don't Confuse Thrift Unreduced Paint with Ordinary Paste Paints—Thrift is a strictly high grade ready mixed paint—the pigment, coloring matter, dryer, etc. are all ground together in 12% of pure linseed oil, these ingredients are ground through tremendously heavy paint mills, in this way every particle is thoroughly broken up and impregnated with linseed oil.

OUR ASSURANCE TO EACH AND EVERY CUSTOMER

$2.50 Per Gallon

Thrift Paint is made from the highest possible grades of raw materials procurable, combined with pure linseed oil and the necessary dryers, and when thinned or reduced with pure linseed oil, as described in our directions will give long wearing, satisfying results.

If pure linseed oil and pure gum spirits of turpentine are used and for any reason the paint fails to give complete and entire satisfaction, we hereby agree to furnish a sufficient quantity of Thrift Paint and the necessary oil to repaint any surface to which Thrift Paint has been applied.

For best results use only pure linseed oil and pure gum spirits of turpentine. Substitutes of any kind no matter how strongly recommended will not give satisfaction. If impure thinner or substitutes are used, assurances as to the superiority, wear and service of the paint is withdrawn.

GARIS' BEDTIME STORIES

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE DEER.

[BY HOWARD R. GARIS.]

[Copyright 1922, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.]

Uncle Wiggily was hopping through the woods one day, looking here and there beneath the bushes for an adventure, when, all at once, he heard a loud noise, as if a strong wind might be blowing through the trees, lashing the branches to and fro.

"Dear me!" whispered the bunny rabbit gentleman to himself. "This sounds as if the Skillery Scallery Alligator were lashing about with his big flail of a tail, trying to knock the trees down. I must be very careful!"

But a moment later Uncle Wiggily heard a sad voice calling:

"Help! Help! Will some one please help me to get loose!"

"That doesn't sound like the Alligator," thought the bunny. "He has a voice like a bull. This voice is much more gentle. I'll see who it is that wants help."

Uncle Wiggily looked through the bushes and there he saw a brown

"My horns are caught."

animal, with long, thin legs, with curving, pronged horns on his head, and a short, stubby tail, covered on one side with white hairs, so that it looked like a handkerchief waving.

"Oh, you're a deer, aren't you?" asked Uncle Wiggily.

"Yes," answered the other animal. "I am. My name is the Virginia, or white tailed deer, and now I almost wish I were a rabbit, like you."

"Why?" asked Uncle Wiggily. "You are so much larger and stronger than I, and so much more beautiful, that I can't see why you would want to be a rabbit. Such wonderful horns as you have, too!"

"Yes, it's because of my horns that I'm in trouble!" said the white-tailed deer. "My horns are caught in a tangle of wild grape vines, and, jump around as I have been doing the last hour, I can't get loose."

"Oh, then it was you who made that sound like wind rushing through the trees?" asked Uncle Wiggily.

"It was," said the deer. "I kicked up with my heels and I kicked down with my heels, but I can't get loose and I don't know what to do. That's why I called for help!"

"Oh, I'll help you!" offered Uncle Wiggily, and with his sharp teeth he soon gnawed through the tangle of vines that had caught on the other animal's horns and thus the bunny set the deer free.

"Oh, thank you so much!" called the deer to the rabbit. "You have done me a great favor, and if ever I can do one for you it will make me very happy."

Uncle Wiggily twinkled his pink nose, and said not to bother about that, as one must do favors whenever one could without expecting a favor in return. Then the bunny hopped on his way and the deer ran his way, and soon something else happened.

The Woozie Wolf and the Fuzzy Fox started out together that day to find some ears to nibble, and, as usual, they first looked for Uncle Wiggily.

"That rabbit has the best ears for nibbling I ever saw," said the Fox.

"Yes," agreed the Wolf. "The only trouble is, Uncle Wiggily plays so many tricks on us that, never yet, have we really nibbled his ears. We catch him often enough, but he gets away."

"We'll get him this time all right," said the cunning Fox. "You take the path to the left through the woods, and I'll take the path to the right. Whoever first finds Uncle Wiggily will wave his handkerchief. Then the other will run up and, both together, we'll have him."

Good!" cried the Wolf.

"Bad!" whispered to himself the white-tailed deer who, hidden behind the bushes, heard all that was said. "This is my chance to do Uncle Wiggily a favor," thought the deer.

He ran a little way into the woods where he could see the Wolf on the path to the left. Turning around, with his back to the path, the deer flipped his white tail up and down in the air. The Wolf saw it and said:

"Ah, my friend the Fox is waving his handkerchief. He has caught Uncle Wiggily. I'll run and help nibble his ears!" The Wolf started to run toward where he had seen the white thing waving. Then the deer cut across to the path, once more the deer waved his white tail.

"Ah, my friend the Wolf is waving his white handkerchief. He has caught Uncle Wiggily, and I'll go help nibble his ears!" barked the Fox, and away he ran toward where he had seen the white thing waving.

But both time it was the deer's tail, and not the handkerchiefs of the Wolf and Fox. Those two bad chaps, instead of running toward one another, ran away, one from the other, and soon they were miles apart, and lost in the deep, dark forest.

Uncle Wiggily hopped safely on, but after a while he said:

"Dear me! I'm not having any adventures at all today. That is except the one with the deer. I wonder what has become of the Fox and Wolf?"

"I can tell you!" laughed the deer, and then he told about waving his white tail and fooling the bad chaps. Uncle Wiggily laughed, too, and thanked the deer, and so every thing came out all right.

JUBILEE'S PARDNER

by Judd Mortimer Lewis

Illustrations by Edwins

It did not do its raising in the night last night. When me and Jubilee woke up it felt kinda warm, and I thought it was going to be a nice day, and maybe we could go somewhere after school, but it began to rain while I was letting Jubilee down by the rope in his teeth, and it was raining hard when I went out to the barn, and the alley looks dirty and wet and the yard looks black and muddy, and there isn't any sky and all the roofs are black and shiny.

After breakfast when we were all going to school we felt kinda sour, till we came along to where an automobile was stuck in the mud and the hind wheels slid around and did not do anything, and the man got out and looked at it, and said a lot of things to it, but it never budged. Then a man came along and said to the automobile man: "You are in a (swear word) of a hole, ain't you?" but the auto man never said anything and the other man went away laughing like it was a good joke.

Then the man got out some chains and said for us to stick around and give him a push when he got the chains on, and maybe he would get out all right. So we stayed there, and he got the chains on the wheels and a lot of mud on himself, and then he told us to push when he started the engine; so we got behind him and braced ourselves to push as hard as we could, and all at once the car started before we knew it was going to and did not leave us anything to brace against and every one of us fell on our stummicks in the mud.

I was the worst because I was the captain of the bunch and I was right over the deepest hole the wheel had dug, and the man never stopped. He waved his hand as he went around the corner and that was the last we saw of him, and it was so near school time that we had to run to get to school, and Mrs. Duglun reached out to pull me out of the mud and have the janitor give us a bucket of water and we could wash our clothes and ourselves and come upstairs when we were all dry. We did not get dry till school let out, and we blacked up with coal dust all over and made out that we were niggers. We did not get it all off but we had a lot of fun. So this is one day that we were lucky. Me and Jubilee went to bed early. We should worry.

YOUNG GIRLS NEED CARE

Mothers, watch your Daughters' Health

Health Is Happiness

From the time a girl reaches the age of twelve until womanhood is established, she needs all the care a thoughtful mother can give.

The condition that the girl is then passing through is so critical, and may have such far reaching effects upon her future happiness and health, that it is almost criminal for a mother or guardian to withhold counsel or advice.

Many a woman has suffered years of prolonged pain and misery through having been the victim of thoughtlessness or ignorance on the part of those who should have guided her through the dangers and difficulties that beset this period.

Mothers should teach their girls what danger comes from standing around with cold or wet feet, from lifting heavy articles, and from overworking. Do not let them over-study. If they complain of headache, pains in the back and lower limbs, they need a mother's thoughtful care and sympathy.

A Household Word in Mother's House

writes Mrs. Lynd, about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"My mother gave me Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound when I was 14 years old for troubles girls often have and for loss of weight. Then after I married I took the Vegetable Compound before each child was born and always when I felt the least run-down. Both my sister and sister-in-law take it and have only the highest praise for it. It has been a household word in my mother's house for years." — Mrs. KATHERYN LYND, 2451 Gladys Ave., Chicago, Ill.

A Little Book Helped Her to Decide

Milwaukee, Wis. — "My daughter took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as she was so weak and did not feel like going to school. She was like that for a whole year before taking your Vegetable Compound. I found a little book of yours in our mail-box and decided to give her your medicine. She is now strong and well and attends school every day. We recommend your Vegetable Compound to all mothers with weak daughters. You may use this letter as a testimonial." — Mrs. F. KLUCZNY, 917 20th Ave., Milwaukee, Wis.

"I was always feeling tired and sleepy, was losing in weight and would faint at times. I had other troubles too, that made me feel badly. I read your little books and heard friends talk about the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done them, so I have taken it too. The results are most satisfactory, for I have gained in weight and my bad symptoms are gone. I recommend your Vegetable Compound to all my friends and you may make whatever use you like of this letter." — GLORIA RAMIREZ, 1116 9th Ave., Tampa, Florida.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Private Text-Book upon "Ailments Peculiar to Women" will be sent you free upon request. Write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Massachusetts. This book contains valuable information.

Do you like to solve puzzles? Good. Then try this new one. It's a peach. See the ten funny sentences above. Rearrange these sentences so that you have the names of ten famous statesmen. For instance, by correctly rearranging Sentence No. 10, you will have our President's name, Warren Harding. If you can rearrange all the ten names you can win First Prize.

Most likely you know the names of quite a number of the country's most Famous Statesmen but just to refresh your memory we are listing a few of them: Charles Hughes, Warren Harding, Andrew Volstead, Gilbert Hitchcock, Hiram Johnson, Miles Poindexter, James Reed, Herbert Hoover, Charles Mellon, Henry Wallace, Arthur Capper, William Bryan, Calvin Coolidge, Woodrow Wilson, Henry Lodge, Carter Glass, Charles Denby, John Weeks and Oscar Underwood.

185 "Points" Wins $1000 Prize

Here's the way to win. If you get 185 points you will be awarded the first prize of $1,000 or a fine new Oakland Touring Car. You will receive 100 points for solving the puzzle shown above—10 points for each name that you arrange correctly. That will be more than half the battle won. Of the remaining points 60 will be awarded as soon as you prove that you have introduced The Rural American into five homes. You can get the other 25 points by making up the nearest correct list of words out of the first two letters of the last names of the ten statesmen.

DON'T send your list of words in NOW. Just send your answer to the above puzzle. If it is correct it will win you 100 points toward the $1,000.00 or the Oakland Touring Car. Send in your solution right away. We will write and tell you how to get up your word list.

Easy to Win—Send No Money

You will not be asked to subscribe to The Rural American or to spend a single penny of your money in order to win. We merely want your help in introducing this weekly newspaper to five of your friends. Just write your answer to the Great Statesmen Puzzle on one side of the sheet of paper and PRINT your name and address in the upper right hand corner. The answer gaining 185 points will win the Oakland Touring Car or the $1,000.00. There are 25 big prizes in all. In case of a tie, all tying contestants will receive the prize tied for. Do your best and you can win. Contest closes May 31st, 1922. Answer the puzzle NOW.

Why the $10.90 USCO is better than just a $10.90 tire

ON November 10, 1921, the 30 x 3½ "Usco" was marked to sell for $10.90.

This odd and closely figured price was the lowest quotation ever made on any tire of known standards.

A genuine pioneering step by the makers of U. S. Tires.

Now comes a lot of different $10.90 tires being rushed into the market. "Special" tires. "New" treads.

Unfamiliar to look at—with perhaps an atmosphere of having been made to meet the price.

But the "Usco" still occupies a place by itself. A good old standby on millions of cars for years. Better than it ever was.

Still putting the emphasis on honest quality, even if it does sell for only ten dollars and ninety cents.

The $10.90 tire with the record of a proven product.

The tire that people still buy for the dignity of its quality regardless of the low amount they pay.

A CLEAN-UP IS NEEDED.

That President Harding should be commended for making changes in supervisory positions in the government service with a view to attaining efficiency and that measure of economy which is necessary in order to reduce taxes, is the assertion of the Republican Publicity association, in a statement issued through the president of that organization, Hon. Jonathan Bourne, Jr. The statement says, in part:

"Mr. Harding has taken plenty of time to satisfy himself of the true conditions, and has accumulated sufficient evidence to warrant drastic action. The wholesale clean-up of the bureau of engraving and printing is part of the effort to reorganize the federal service along lines of Republican sympathy and cooperation.

"There can be no just criticism of President Harding for what he is doing; rather should he be congratulated for his latest move toward federal efficiency. Practically every office-holder in a position of power or influence under the former administration was appointed because of his value as a political prop to the Wilson-McAdoo-Burleson-Tumulty machine. Those appointees know why they were selected, and they also know that their tenure of office depended on loyalty to the machine. Republican policies are almost a complete reversal of those that obtained when Mr Wilson was president. The closest cooperation is essential if the people are to get the sort of government they have a right to expect after the overwhelming Republican vote that put President Harding in the White House. That cooperation will be fatally defective if it is going to depend on Wilson holdovers for success.

"Furthermore, the Republicans have assumed entire responsibility for the conduct of the government while they are in control, and the people of the country will hold the party accountable for whatever mistakes may be made. That being the fact, President Harding must be accorded the right of selecting his own assistants. Not only cabinet officers, but subordinate officials having supervisory authority in directing the management of public business, should be men who believe that the president's policies are sound and who are willing to do their full part toward making them a success.

"Not only does Mr. Harding owe it to himself to appoint men in sympathy with his work, but he owes it to the voters themselves to see that no man is kept in a position of executive responsibility who is not a loyal supporter of the Republican desire to get the nation back to normal, curtail public expenditures and reduce the burden of taxation. Only by so doing can the verdict of the ballots in the 1920 elections be fulfilled. The people signified their determination to have an unhampered Republican administration of the executive and legislative branches of the government, as well as a Republican president in the White House. Mr. Harding should be given nation-wide support in his effort to rid the public service of men who are either incompetent or not in sympathy with his effort to effect material economies in the interest of the taxpayers."

A self-moving lawnmover, operated by gasolene, has been invented. The man-operated lawnmover is bad enough at 4 a. m.

BEING HANDY WITH BOTH HANDS.

This is a right-handed world, but there are many left-handed people in it. We don't know that the world would be any better if all the people in it were right-handed, but scientists say that it would be a lot more convenient.

Generally speaking, manufacturers recognize that this is a right-handed world because they don't build things for left-handed people, unless by special order.

Left-handed people are not awkward; what they do merely looks awkward. But there is a widespread movement on just now to make left-handed boys and girls right-handed. This is begun in the school-room because, it is pointed out, the left-handed boy or girl, who has been converted into a right-hander, will discover everything more conveniently arranged.

Next, maybe somebody will start a movement to make every boy and girl right-handed and left-handed; train children so that can use one hand just as well as the other. Then, finally, perhaps, there won't be right-handed and left-handed persons—everybody will be ambidextrous.

WELL-TIMED ADVICE.

In a recent address in San Francisco, Elihu Root stressed the duty of the citizen to refrain from wantonly stirring up the ill will of foreign countries. "The people of the United States," said he, "should make it the first great lesson of their duties to punish with disapproval the man who wilfully stirs up the animosity of foreign countries." Mr. Root's comment is well timed. There are many individuals and some newspapers in this country who, under the guise of patriotism, go out of their way to attack the policies of other nations, even those which affect only domestic affairs. Vigilance to prevent encroachment on American rights abroad does not include a license to attack the rights of others. It is the duty of America to be eternally on guard against trespassing from foreign sources, but America should be equally careful not to do violence to the sensibilities of foreign nations.

FREE FROM ENTANGLEMENTS.

It will require adroit diplomacy to keep the Genoa conference within bounds, and prevent it from developing into controversies that will preclude any real accomplishment. Discussion of German and Russian questions are likely to reveal bitter divergence in the views of some of the nations at Genoa. Were the United States to be represented at the meeting it could hardly fail to take sides in such debates, thereby inevitably losing some of the prestige gained at the Washington conference. Happily, this country will not be at Genoa, and will be free from all the entanglements that may result.

In Ohio, that means, of course, see Ohio first. After seeing Ohio, then see the rest of America.

As the vacation season approaches, many people are wondering where to go this summer. If you haven't seen all of Ohio, why not learn more about the great Buckeye state and visit some of its wonders.

There are no more beautiful spots anywhere than we have right here in Ohio. Thousands go long distances and see less.

PLAYS, PLAYERS AND CRITICS.

The play is done; the curtain drops,
Slow falling to the prompter's bell:
A moment yet the actor stops,
And looks around, to say farewell.
It is an irksome word and task;
And when he's laughed and said his say,
He shows, as he removes his mask,
A face that's anything but gay.
—Thackeray.

The stage has always come in for more than its just share of criticism.

Our Puritan fathers would have none of it. To them it was anathema.

Dr. Johnson had little use for players—if we may judge from what he had to say of them, for he remarked upon them:

"Players, sir! I look upon them as no better than creatures set upon tables and joint-stools to make faces and produce laughter, like dancing dogs. But, sir, you will allow that some players are better than others? Yes, sir; as some dogs are better than others."

Cumberland had a much higher conception of the province and purpose of the player, than had Dr. Johnson; and, doubtless, held the stage in much greater estimation. For he said:

"The actor is in the capacity of a steward to every living muse, and of an executor to every departed one. The poet digs up the ore; he sifts it from the dross, refines and purifies it for the mint; the actor sets the stamp upon it, and makes it current in the world."

I think Dr. Johnson was right—and was wrong; and I think Cumberland was right—and was wrong.

For there are actors and actors—just as there are preachers and preachers—just as there are teachers and teachers.

But, as always, we have persons today who can discover no possible good in plays and players; consequently, they have no possible use for the stage—and no good word for it.

Such a person is Rev. John Roach Straton, of New York. He intemperately and rashly declares that the stage is destructive of all good morals; and he denounces the people of the stage, in a wholesale and inclusive way, as unclean and unfit.

Rev. Mr. Straton goes entirely too far—in one direction.

But William A. Brady goes as far in the opposite direction—when he attempts to give the stage and all its people a clean bill of moral health.

The stage is here, as it always has been; and here it will remain.

It has a place in our civilization.

Doubtless, we make too much of it—in a sense; and, doubtless, we don't make enough of it—in another sense.

Maybe it needs reforming; but it doesn't need reforming more than do many of our other industries, activities and amusements.

To reform the stage—we should reform ourselves!

In some parts of Switzerland a number of Easter eggs are distributed over a level space and covered with sand. The young men and maidens then dance round them. If a couple finds the dance without breaking an egg they become engaged, and sometimes they are married before the evening.

Fire has played a prominent part in many Easter celebrations in different countries. Especially in the East do the people believe in what is called "The Miracle of the Easter Fire"—a ceremony of elaborate character. It is confined to the Greek and other Eastern churches, and takes place each Easter in Jerusalem.

Regarding the origin of the "three-mile limit" there are two explanations—one, that it was adopted because three miles is the maximum distance an average-sized person can see looking seawards from the shore; the other, that it was fixed as the limit of territorial waters at a time when three miles was the maximum range of guns.

A London jeweler once made an Easter egg, a foot high, of the choicest ivory. Before the contents were added, the egg was sent to Calcutta, where native carvers engraved on it a series of pictures representing the various scenes of the Crucifixion and Resurrection. This work also occupied four months. The egg was then filled with jewelry—diamond bracelets, necklaces, and so on. The present was intended for a lucky Easter bride, and represented an outlay of about $100,000.

GREATEST NEWS STORY

The International Sunday-School Lesson for April 16 is In Easter Lesson.—Matthew 28:1-20; 19-31.

[BY WILLIAM T. ELLIS.]

... told the most sensational important news in the history of modern newspapers extra! and had the editors rushed to their task, every paper would run the story in big type on the first page as the big news of the day. Most of the reporters of the news staff would be assigned to cover it. All antecedent facts would be dug up. The woman herself would have been overwhelmed with interviews. Her personal record would have been investigated. The world's greatest authorities on the general theme of her story would have been called upon for statements of their views. Pictures of the place of the story would have been printed. The editorial writers would have made the significance of their leader for the day.

Indeed, the earthquaking story of the woman, subsequently confirmed by many other witnesses at the time more impressive has continued to be so. No report of any battle or earthquake or fate of king or president of any discovery or advance

Mary of Magdala announced, "I have seen the Master!" she made history that day and the centuries have echoed it ever since. Hers it was to give the first testimony to the bodily resurrection from the dead, the fact of supreme importance to all men everywhere. As a reward for her faithfulness being "last at the cross, and first at the tomb," it was given to her to be the bearer of the tidings that changes everybody's attitude toward existence and conduct. Behavior is controlled by belief: the belief in the resurrection is the most single factor in shaping human character.

It is said that one women said at the first Easter underlies everything that is worth saying about the Easter which the world celebrates in this year of our Lord, 1922. All the talk about new millinery and new clothes and holiday-making is but faintly symbolic of the newness wrapped up in the message of Mary.

For Easter really means that the dead live again; that the grave is not our goal; that man is born for two worlds, that the power of earth, and of all the sin it symbolizes, is broken; and that our immortal spirits, which are our true selves, are meant by God to be victorious over all the defeats and limitations of the flesh. It is the greatest of crowns that is thus placed upon the human brow by the news of the resurrection of Jesus; who pledged his own life as a token that His friends should live as He lives.

Despite all that the ancients believed about the possibility of a continued existence after death; and despite the poets' "intimations of immorality;" and despite all the beautiful Easter symbolism of nature, the simple fact remains that our one real warrant for a belief in a resurrection is the word of Mary of Magdala and her fellow-witnesses of the risen Jesus. "Natural religion" does not give up any satisfactory foundation for the hope of the resurrection of our dear dead and of ourselves; only the revelation of the New Testament does so. Easter beauty and Easter music simply reecho the Book's triumphant cry, "He is risen. The Lord is risen indeed!"

Elbowing Out a King.

In the ordinary course of international lessons in Old Testament history which we have been following, today's theme would have been the reforms and rebuilding by good King Josah. But the lesson committee, recognizing the paramountcy of the resurrection story, provide this Easter lesson as optional. Judah's King Josah is of small consequence alongside of the King of Life. The portion of the evidence assigned for special study is as follows; I quote from the Weymouth translation for the sake of its freshness.

"On that same first day of the week, when it was evening and, for fear of the Jews, the doors of the house where the disciples were, were locked, Jesus came and stood in their midst, and said unto them,

"'Peace be to you!'

"Having said this He showed them His hands and also His side; and the disciples were filled with joy at seeing the Master. A second time, therefore, He said unto them,

"'Peace be to you! As the Father sent Me, I also now send you.'

"Having said this, He breathed upon them and said,

"'Receive the Holy Spirit. If you remit the sins of any persons, they remain remitted unto them. If you bind fast the sins of any, they remain bound.'

"Thomas, one of the twelve—surnamed 'The Twin'—was not among them when Jesus came. So the rest of the disciples told him,

"'We have seen the Master!'

"His reply was,

"'Unless I see in His hands the wound made by the nails and put my finger into the wound, and put my hand into His side, I will never believe it.'

"A week later the disciples were again in the house, and Thomas was with them, when Jesus came—though the doors were locked—and stood in their midst, and said,

"'Peace be to you.'

"Then He said to Thomas,

"'Bring your finger here and feel My hands; bring your hand and put it into My side; and do not be ready to disbelieve, but to believe.'

"'My Lord and my God!' replied Thomas.

"'Because you have seen me,' replied Jesus, 'you have believed. Blessed are those who have not seen and yet have believed.'

"There were also a great number of other signs which Jesus performed in the presence of the disciples, which are not recorded in this book. But these are recorded in order that you may believe that He is the Christ, the Son of God, and that, through believing, you may have life through His name."

Months ago I heard a clergyman preach a "liberal," and, as he thought, a "scholarly" sermon on the resurrection, wherein he denied categorically that Jesus had really risen from the dead. He had been reading rationalistic theories upon the subject; and the most inexcusable of his glaring mistakes was that he had failed to read what the New Testament clearly says upon the resurrection. This was a neglect of the evidence in the case of which no good lawyer or journalist or scholar would have been guilty.

That man missed the point of his subject. Life after death is not proved anywhere by nature. It is made known only by revelation. Nowhere else than in the New Testament is it irrefutably set forth. No scalpel of science is sharp enough to cut out the tissues of the doctrine of the resurrection from the body of the teachings and life of Jesus, and from the testimony of the New Testament writers. If you want to know the comforting and inspiring truth about life after death you will find it, not in harpsodies upon nature, not in material philosophy; not in spirit-rappings and writings; but in the clear declarations of the inspired word of God. Personal immortality may be denied only by a repudiation of the Scriptures, which bind together, like Siamese twins, the two vital truths of the resurrection of Jesus and the risen life of the believer here below and his eternal redemption.

For weeks past I have personally been dwelling within the shadow of the mystery of death; and only a few hours ago I stood beside the open grave of my father; so I am not writing as a casual and uninterested commentator upon an abstract theme. There is neither comfort nor hope for the bereaved except in the truth of a risen Redeemer. The words of the Bible hold the assurance which is lacking in all nature and in all other literature. The good news for which the world waits is found only in the record of which the story of Mary of Magdala is a credible part.

Beyond the Natural Order.

"The Spring blew trumpets of color;
Her Green sang in my brain—
I heard a blind man groping
'Tap—tap' with his cane;

"I pitied him in his blindness;
But can I boast, 'I see'?
Perhaps there walks a spirit
Close by who pities me,—

"A spirit who hears me tapping
The five-sensed cane of mind
Amid such unguessed glories—
That I am worse than blind."

This present Eastertide finds the world agog over the wonders of the radiophone. Learned and ignorant, rich and poor, the great and the common place, are enthralled by the mystery and by the possibilities of wireless. Factories are unable to supply the demand for radio outfits. Day and night the upper ether is filled with song and story and sermon and speech and music and news, which the currents above the earth carry to limitless regions. This morning's paper told of a ship 2 miles from shore hearing a program broadcasted from Newark, New Jersey. What a jolt for the materialists who will believe only that they can see and understand! A writer in the World's Work suggests that the voices spoken into space through the radiophone are carried out on the limitless sea of ether-waves into endless ages of time, so that they may almost be called eternal!

All this seems beyond the natural order. It is like the opening of a peep-hole into God's unrevealed world, which "eye hath not seen, nor ear heard." Intimations of the spiritual possibilities involved make it easy for even an unimaginative person to conceive the powers of the free life beyond the grave which God has prepared for those who love Him.

"There is a spiritual body, and there is a natural body," said the Apostle. Are we yet to learn anew that one is as real as the other? For answer, we turn back to the sublime story which Mary shouted to her friends, that Jesus, once dead, was alive again. All the glorious possibilities of the resurrection life are dependent upon the resurrection fact. Immortality is the greatest reason for mortality. "If ye then be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above."

IN THE WORLD OF THE RADIO

MAKING DETECTOR FOR VACUUM TUBE RECEIVING SET IS MADE EASY JOB

The vacuum tube detector and its controls are the only additional essentials for the operation of the intermediate wave receiver.

The vacuum tube base may be of any standard make. It will be found cheaper to buy this equipment than to make it. The four springs which make contact with the prongs of the tube are marked "G," for Grid, "P" for Plate, "F" or "Fil" for the negative connection of the newfilament, and "F plus" for the positive connection. The connections to those terminals are made as shown in the diagram.

The grid condenser has a capacity of .00025 Mfd., and the grid leak value is approximately one megohm, this value varying with the characteristics of the tube. A block twenty-two volt battery will supply the plate voltage and a six-volt battery, preferably a six-volt forty to sixty hour storage battery will provide the current for the filament of the vacuum tube.

A rheostat of about one and one-half amperes capacity will serve to regulate the filament current to the correct operating value.

The set is carefully connected, as shown in the diagram of connections. Every joint should be soldered if possible, for leaky and microphonic contacts will interfere considerably with the efficient operation of the circuit. The vacuum tube is lighted by turning the rheostat slowly.

If the set has been properly wired, and if the tickler coupling is at maximum, a beating note will be heard in the telephone receivers. The set is then said to be "oscillating." If any difficulty is experienced in making the set oscillate, the tickler connections should be reversed. The beating note will then be heard.

Just how the regenerate effect is obtained will be seen from the following: The very small impulse intercepted by the antenna when applied to the grid of the detector tube releases a greater amount of energy in the plate circuit. That is, the tube acts as a relay or valve, which releases a certain amount of energy from the local "B" battery, and this energy actuates the telephone receivers.

Now, if part of this energy is fed back into the grid circuit again, it follows that the energy operating the valve will be increased that much and that a greater amount of energy will be allowed to flow into the telephone receivers.

This regenerative process can not be repeated indefinitely, for there are losses which must be compensated. These losses in the grid circuit are made up by the plate circuit and are supplied through the "tickler coil." This effect of feeding back the energy results in amplified signals. Amplification of about 100 times may be secured with a well-built regenerative receiver.

A little practice will enable the operator to tune in the signals on this regenerative set. First set the tickler coil about half way on the scale. Then vary the induction switch and the variable condenser until the loudest response is obtained in the receivers. A readjustment of the tickler coil at this time will bring the signals very clearly.

A point will be reached where the signals will become "mushy." The best point is just before the effect is noticeable. Signals which can not be heard with the plain tuner will be audible as soon as the tickler coil is adjusted to the correct position.

BY THE EDITOR

It seems strange, but it is a fact, that it was the German government, which we think of as being almost paralyzed by the depreciation of the mark and the weight of the reparations demand, that really started the world on its present radio activities, so far as broadcasting is concerned. The German government radiated the Berlin opera and established public receiving stations where this music could be heard without cost.

Education of persons unable to read was a radio-telephone possibility predicted to members of the Congressional club in Washington, recently by Major General George O. Squier, chief signal officer of the army. General Squier said with all persons able to speak and hear it would now be but another short step to broadcast and make interesting and popular important educational topics, such as agriculture, domestic science; in fact, almost anything any one could think of. It was his opinion the educational possibilities of the radio would be an important factor in years to come.

Eastern cities are the scenes of frauds of many kinds and every new development gives sharpers added chances to cheat the public. It is said that one shop willingly gave demonstrations of excellent music and famous speeches furnished by a phonograph in the cellar.

Several manufacturers are at work on devices that will render secret messages sent through the air, but intended only for certain receiving stations. This has long been one of the disadvantages of wireless communication. Should these devices be perfected the rapid commercial extension of the radio will be almost instantaneous.

Radio enthusiasts hear a great deal about the vacuum tube. It is this tube that has made recent great developments possible. A million dollars were spent developing it and several hundred patents were secured covering details of its construction. It looks like a little incandescent electric light bulb, but it is the miracle worker of the wireless. When the secret of its operation is understood there will no longer be any mystery about radio, but neither the inventor or the hundred or more scientists who have labored to bring it to perfection are able to tell why it works as it does. It just does, that's all.

MARION CLUB IS TO HAVE A RADIO SET

In the near future, members of the Marion club, will be entertained with radio concerts.

Announcement was made yesterday that the Marion club would install a radio receiving station of the latest and most up-to-date kind at the club-house on south Prospect street. It is estimated that the outfit, together with a loud speaking attachment, would cost from $300 to $400. Members of the club believe that the location of the club house is admirable for the erection of a radio aerial because of the absence of high tension wires. Letters were sent out to members, asking for their support of the project. It is planned to install the outfit in the near future.

GAS IN THE STOMACH IS DANGEROUS.

GAS IN THE STOMACH
Recommends Daily Use of Magnesia To Overcome Trouble, Caused By Fermenting Food and Acid Indigestion.

Gas and wind in the stomach accompanied by that full, bloated feeling after eating are almost certain evidence of the presence of excessive hydrochloric acid in the stomach, creating so-called "acid indigestion."

Acid stomachs are dangerous because too much acid irritates the delicate lining of the stomach, often leading to gastritis accompanied by serious stomach ulcers. Food ferments and sours, creating the distressing gas which distends the stomach and hampers the normal functions of the vital internal organs, often affecting the heart.

It is the worst of folly to neglect such a serious condition or to treat with ordinary digestive aids which have no neutralizing effect on the stomach acids. Instead get from any druggist a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water right after eating. This will drive the gas, wind and bloat right out of the body. Where the stomach, neutralize the excess acid and prevent its formation and there is no sourness or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and the best form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.—Adv.

PLAYERS ARE NOT IN BEST OF CONDITION

Many Teams Lose Old Time Skill and Efficiency.

GIANTS' PITCHING STAFF IS UNCERTIAN

Cincinnati Reds Trade Away Infield Strength—Cleveland an Aging Club.

The world's champion Giants open on the Polo grounds with the Dodgers today with an uncertain pitching staff and Frank Frisch on crutches. The St. Louis Cardinals, most impresive hitting club in baseball, are to face the Pirates in St. Louis minus Fournier, Lavan and Meller and that will help like ground glass helps digestion.

Some of the Pirates told me in Hot Springs that they expected to take the Cardinals for six of the eight games to be played early in the race. They have a right good chance to make good their threat now.

The Boston Braves, strengthened by Kopf and Marquard, open in Sleepy Hollow with the Shorlora Phils and should profit thereby, while the Chicago Cubs and the Cincinnati Reds, opening on Garry Herrmann's lawn, are a toss-up. Both are second division ball clubs, the Cubs by deterioration but the Reds by preference, apparently. The latter traded away their infield strength and are now yammering because Pitcher John Scott has a lame arm. They would have got the worst of the Boston deal if Scott had four arms.

None Too Well Fixed.

Likewise, the champion Yanks are none too well fixed for the opening in Washington. With Ruth and Meusel ineligible, they must get the best of pitching for the first six weeks of the season. Otherwise—goodnight, Tosti.

The Senators are the most improved club in the league and regardless of Walter Johnson's illness, will be at, or near the top all the way.

Cleveland, opening at home with Detroit, is an ageing club and the Tigers themselves have the most uncertain infield in the league, with the possible exception of the Athletics.

The latter opens away from home with the Boston Red Sox and nobody cares one way or the other.

The St. Louis-Chicago series at Comiskey park should be a good one. The Browns, with all their hitting, are not as strong defensively as they might be and the White Sox seem to have undergone a reform since last year.

However, you never can tell, as the deaf mute said.

PRESIDENT HARDING TO TOSS FIRST BALL

Sunny Spring Day for Opening Game of Season.

Washington, April 12.—A sunny spring day, more like June than April, was provided today for the opening game of the season in the national capital between the Senators and the champion New York Yankees.

President Harding and members of his cabinet will occupy boxes for the opening and the president will toss out the first ball.

Mogridge and Garrity will work for the Nationals and Hoyt or Mays and Schang for the Yanks.

Babe Ruth and Bob Meusel, the Yanks' siege guns, will watch the game from the dugout because of the Landis suspension.

Cool Weather at Opening.

Chicago, April 12.—Clear weather with the temperature probably a little too low to make a long session in the bleachers comfortable, was the prospect for the opening baseball game of the season this afternoon between the White Sox and the St. Louis Browns.

Urban Faber for the White Sox, and Urban Shocker for the Browns were the probable pitching selections.

Schalk for the Sox and Severeid for the Browns, will be behind the plate.

Giants and Dodgers Start Game.

New York, April 12.—Fair and cooler was the official verdict of the weatherman as the New York Giants and Brooklyn Dodgers made ready to open the National league season here today. The skies were overcast early in the day. The probable batteries are: Nehf and Snyder, New York; Grimes and Mulet, Brooklyn.

Chilly Opening Day.

Cleveland, April 12.—Storm-filled clouds and typical "football weather" greeted fans at the opening of the baseball season at Dunn field. Ear muffs and chinchillas will be in order if a game is played this afternoon. Coveleskie and Nunamaker are Speaker's battery selections, while Ty Cobb, the Tiger chieftain, will use Ehmke or Oldham, whichever looks best, with Bassler behind the bat.

Perfect Weather in Boston.

Boston, April 12.—Perfect weather prevailed today when the Boston Red Sox met the Philadelphia Athletics in the opening game at Fenway park today. Manager Hugh Duffy selected the veteran Jack Quinn to pitch for the Red Sox. Connie Mack, of the Athletics, was still doubtful about his choice for the opening pitching assignment but Hasty will probably get the job.

St. Louis Season Opens.

St. Louis, April 12.—Clear skies and warm sun greeted the early fine-buckers for bleacher seats to the initial clash between the St. Louis Cardinals and the Pittsburgh Pirates here today.

According to last minute dope three regulars, Fournier, Lavan and Mueller, would be absent from the Cardinal batting order, due to minor ailments.

Either Cooper or Adams will pitch for Pittsburgh, with Gooch receiving, while Shardel will probably grace the mound for the local team, playing opposite Ainsmith.

Phillies To Meet Braves.

Philadelphia, April 12.—The 1922 baseball season will be ushered in here this afternoon when the Phillies meet the Boston Braves.

ARE YOU THIN AND SCRAWNY?

The Bones of the Body Were Not Intended to Show. Cover Them With Flesh.

Nobody wants to be called "fat," but even fat people are better off than those unfortunates who are so painfully thin that they have that "scrawny" look. Especially is this true of women. The rounded figure is the figure of health and beauty. If you are too thin you can put solid, firm flesh by taking Gude's Pepto-Mangan with your meals for a few weeks. It will put you in better health and Nature will restore you to your normal weight. Pepto-Mangan itself does not add weight but it does build up health. You won't be thin and scrawny if you are well. Get it of your druggist. He sells it in both liquid and tablet form.—Adv.

A breath from the Orient tempers this modern city. Moored to its docks are great ocean liners, tramps, South Sea traders. Along this water front one may hear the creak of the windlass—the guttural notes of a Lascar crew—the bellowing of a "shell-backed" mate—the music of the sea.

In contrast are the gayly lighted thoroughfares—the cafes and theaters—parks and boulevards—the merry whirl of a pleasure loving metropolis.

...The Nut shrugged and with super...ious nonchalance selected another ...arette from the flat gold case he was fond of displaying; a circumstance which, according to one's bias, might or might not be taken as indicating that the case had been honestly come by. Inez seemed eager to speak, but Red forestalled her.

"It's like this, kid: Eddie's been pinched."

The fact that the person in question, being under indictment for burglary, had for some time succeeded in remaining at large solely by grace of his loyal associates, might have been thought enough to rob this announcement of some of its staggering quality. But to Leonora it came as a genuine shock, and she showed it unmistakably.

"No!" she exclaimed, and added a most unladylike phrase of mixed incredulity and regret. "Somebody's squealed."

"That's just it," Inez affirmed significantly. "I wonder who!"

Leonora needed a little time before she was able to couple the thinly veiled animosity of the gathering, to which she had been sensible ever since entering, with the tone employed by Inez, something which this last would ordinarily have lacked audacity to attempt. Then immediately her temper grew incandescent.

"Meaning me?"

"Why, hon!" Inez drawled, rounding her eyes—"whatever made you think that?"

But she committed the grievous error of trying to exchange with Red a look of malicious understanding which Leonora intercepted instantly.

"Never you mind what made me think that," she said in cold rage; "I get you; I ain't blind and dumb. But take it from me, Inez: you chuck it and chuck it quick. If I get one more word out of you, trying to make me out a stool-pigeon—if I ever see you look that way at Red again—your people'll have no kick coming."

"Oh, is that so?" Inez demanded with mistaken pertness. "What do you think you'll do?"

"Irish you," Leonora informed her savagely—"irish you till all you'll need will be a wood kimono lined with satin and trimmed with tin. And you know I'll do it, too."

Her small emphatic fist struck the table; Red's hand closed on it.

"Easy, kid; don't run away with the wrong idea—"

"I won't. Don't worry." She wrenched her hand free. "I'm no simp. I've got more brains than the rest of this push lumped together—that goes for you, too, Red. And I won't stand for insinuations from nobody—not from that rotten little cat that's trying to make up to you—she's always jealous of me—or anybody else. You . . ." For a moment words proved inadequate. She sat in a tense posture, white with fury, breathing quickly; and even Red avoided her eyes. "Ah, you all make me sick! Eddie gets pinched—God knows how!—and you all fix on me as the squealer because I happen to be a few minutes late tonight! Why, you poor fish—!" She checked abruptly, noting another questionable gap in the company. "Why pick on me? Where's Leo Bielinsky? Why isn't he here? If being late's proof of squealing—he's later than me!"

"That ain't all, Nora," English Addie interposed. "We want to know where you got those clothes."

"What's that to you? Can't I spend my money, dress myself decent, if I want to?"

"Yes; but where'd you get the front you was wearing when Harry seen you up on Fifth avenue yesterday?"

"He never—"

"Oh, yes, I did, Nora," the Nut interrupted with his exasperating gentility, mincing his words in the fashion he found useful in uptown bars. "Putting on dog, too, and getting away with it great—traveling with a dame that looked like she wouldn't take nothing from the queen of England. I tell you, I saw you."

"That's another lie!" But the steadiness of Harry's eyes was disconcerting. Unquestionably he believed his assertions. Leonora's tongue tripped over the denial: "I wasn't . . ."

"Well, then, tell us where you were at four o'clock yesterday afternoon," Addie suggested blandly.

At that hour Leonora had been in a Second avenue motion picture theater with Mario: an indiscretion to which she could not possibly confess. Perceptibly she lost assurance.

"None of your d—n business."

"Better tell 'em, kid," Red counseled uneasily. "You got to come clean—"

"Like h—l I have!" Once more the flames of rage leapt high. "I don't owe this gang anything, much less an account of everything I do. The shoe's on the other foot. You all know me, you all know I'm on the level. Most of you'd be up the river today if it wasn't for me—and you know that, too. How far do you think you'd get if my brains didn't work for you, tell you what to do and how to get away with it without the bulls tumbling? Who planned the raid on Einstein's hock shop? Did any of you get pinched for that? Who figured out how to get those bonds away from the Chemical Trust's messenger? Was anybody lagged for that? . . . And because I take the trouble not to lend a coupla guns right up to you tonight—and because the Nut saw somebody that looked like me all dolled up on Fifth avenue yesterday—or thinks he did—"

"It was you, all right," Harry affirmed coolly.

Their glances met and clashed, the girl's hot with challenge and resentment, the man's cold with malice. For the first time she recognized in this creature an enemy. Then her super-excited intelligence, grappling with the problem of how to confute his implicit accusation, experienced a flash of memory followed by a lightninglike stroke of intuition.

"If you want to know who squealed," she suggested deliberately, "why don't you give Harry the office? Ask him what he does with all his time, where he gets the coin for all his swell clothes, who he talks to when he's bulging up to the bars of the big hotels. Ask him why the cops always look the other way when they see him coming, why he ain't never pinched—"

With an oath Harry thrust back his chair, which overturned with a crash, and jumped up, guilt stamped upon his countenance of sudden pallor, glinting fearfully in his furtive little eyes. But in the same instant the door—left negligently unlocked after the entrance of Leonora—was hastily opened and slammed. The first to identify the man who had slipped in and now stood fumbling with the key, English Addie cried out in shrill dismay: "Leo!" The company turned simultaneously and with confused cries and questions got to its feet.

Slight and under normal height, panting, sweating, haggard, his face livid, eyes terrified, hatless, and with clothing disheveled, Leo Bielinsky, alias Leo the Blood, sank back against the door, one hand pressed to his side just below his laboring heart. The other, holding an automatic pistol, described a gesture of supplication. Red snapped over-shoulder a profane demand for silence. Leo's broken phrases became audible.

". . . Croaked a bull down the street . . . coming out of Bennie's place, Corbin and Ennis tried to jump me . . . Corbin got it." He gesticulated meaningly with the pistol. "Ennis took after me . . . Looks like a frame-up . . . cops everywhere I turned . . ."

Red demanded furiously: "What in h—l'd you come here for?"

"No place else to go . . . cornered, I tell you . . . Listen!" The Russian held up a hand and, bending an ear to the door, heard sounds below inaudible to the others. "There they come now! For God's sake, get me out of this!"

"Fire escape," Red indicated with a jerk of his head. Somebody thrust open the shutters of one window. The murderer pulled himself together, reeled across the room, and lurched out upon an iron platform grating. Immediately he disappeared.

Now the rumor was loud in the hall below, the shrill protestations of the waiters rising above yet dominated by the deeper voices of the police. After brief but violent altercation, heavy feet came pounding up the stairs. Then panic fastened upon the wits of all those in the private dining room and stampeded them toward the fire escape. Primitively in their fright men fought with women for first place at the window. Stifled screams of pain and anger mingled with muttered blasphemies; but the noise of milling feet alone would have been enough to betray them. Not more than two had managed to fight out to the iron platform before the police were clamoring and hammering at the door. Leonora, thrust brutally to one side, saw the futility of trying to escape before the maddened men, and, resigned, stood clear of the crush, watching the panels of the door tremble under a storm of kicks and blows.

Fear was absent from her temper, but she was shaken by impotent exasperation and sad with regrets. This meant an end to everything, not alone to these associations which barely an hour since she herself had planned to forsake, but to all her hope of happiness with Mario. For she had not the remotest doubt but that she, with at least a majority of the others, would be arrested, jailed and, on the evidence of complicity in past exploits which the police spy, Harry the Nut, would be able to lay before the district attorney, sentenced to a term of years in one or another of the state penitentiaries.

And long before she had served out her term Mario would forget her; or, even if he did not, would never, never by any chance, make a woman with a criminal record his wife.

And this was what came of indulging her keen delight in excitement and adventure.

If only she had listened to Mario in time . . .

Seconds dragged like minutes, and the door still held. She began to catch at straws of hope: only three now remained in the room, Charlie the Coke—already with one foot across the sill, whimpering and mouthing curses because of inability to crowd into the press upon the fire escape—Red, and herself.

The hammering on the door stopped. She wondered why. Charlie contrived to jam his terror-racked body out through the window. Red caught Leonora by a shoulder, roughly enough if in a rare impulse of chivalry, and tried to thrust her out after Charlie. But the crush on the platform was still too dense. She heard a dull crash and, swinging round, saw the door, its lock shattered by the impact of a brawny shoulder, slam back against the wall. The policeman who had broken it in stumbled and sprawled full length upon the floor. The plain-clothes man, Ennis, leaped in over his prostrate body. Her ears were deafened with Red's profane instructions to get herself out through the window without more delay. She made a vain attempt to obey, and had half succeeded when a rattle of shots sounded and looking back, she saw the man Ennis pitch forward on his knees, then fall prone. The policeman, scrambling up pistol in hand, received the balance of the clip in Red's automatic, and sank slowly down upon his side.

Screaming with horror, the girl fell back from the window. Red shouldered past her, climbed out, turned and caught her by the arm and dragged her after him, still screaming like a madwoman. She tripped, her head struck heavily against the bottom of the window sash, and the lights dimmed weirdly and burned out, leaving only darkness impenetrable, and a strange hush pierced by thin echoes of eldritch shrieks . . .

Low priced good stocks present splendid opportunities

Optimistic investors are taking advantage of present low prices on various good stocks, to buy additional shares of companies in which they now have holdings, thereby lowering the per-share-cost of their investment. They have placed their buying orders with the thought that the present low market prices reflect the earning powers rather than the intrinsic values of the securities. They realize that the coming business revival should bring increased earnings and higher market quotations.

The report recommends that all actory properties in Russia held by oreigners in 1917 shall be restored o them. German factory properties n Russia were not held by the Ger- ans, but were in the hands of the Russian government at that time, consequently the Germans would not be allowed to recover under the re- port, if adopted as it stands. Nor would Russia be allowed to claim reparations from other countries, but would be permitted to collect from Germany, thus increasing Ger- many's burden.

The Bolshevikl delegation, upon a further reading of the London ex- perts report, were apparently more dissatisfied than ever with it. One prominent Russian declared: "It carries capitulations and tyrannical domination over finances."

Delegates from several countries remarked upon what seemed to them a changed attitude on the part of France toward Russia. They de- clared that Louis Barthou, head of the French delegation, appeared to be specially cordial and conciliatory in his manner towards George Tchit- cherin, leader of the Russian group, in public meetings. They interpret- ed this as indicating that France was disposed to go as far as possible towards reaching an understanding

Southern Tariff Association Opens Fight.

Campaign Against Rum Runners on Canadian Border, While Regarded as Lawful, Will Not Be Drastic, Is Report.

Washington, April 13.—The test of strength between the "big" and "little" navy men was postponed today just as the big navy men were claiming sufficient votes to defeat the 67,000 manpower establishment proposed by the powerful appropria- tions committee.

Because of the death of Represen- tative S. M. Brinson, Democrat, of North Carolina, the house met and adjourned out of respect thus cut- ting off the flood of debate that was to have preceded the final vote.

Seek Foreign Advice.

Washington, April 13.—Congres- sional framers of the "little navy" appropriation bill sought the advice of the British and Japanese embas- sies in Washington and ignored the advice of the American naval ex- perts in preparing the present bill, it was charged in the house by Rep- resentative Rogers, Republican, of Massachusetts.

Condemns Valuation Plan.

Washington, April 13.—Condemn- ing the foreign valuation plan in the new permanent tariff bill as "un- American," the Southern Tariff as- sociation today opened a fight for American valuation before the se- nate tariff "bloc."

The association, representing thousands of southern manufactur- ers, struck a snag, however, when a majority of the "bloc" members ap- peared to favor foreign valuations. It was indicated the fight would be carried to the floor of the senate.

Campaign Not To Be Drastic.

Washington, April 13.—The pro- posed armed campaign against rum runners on the American side of the Canadian border is entirely lawful, but it will not take the drastic form forecast by preliminary announce- ments by prohibition officials, it was stated officially at the treasury de- partment today.

"Like the plan for a prohibition navy, the scheme for an armed cam- paign against liquor smugglers may quickly subside," declared a high of- ficial of the treasury department.

"Like a bumble bee, it is biggest when it is born."

COUNTRY PREY TO ELEMENTS

Large Section Experiencing a Disastrous Spring.

DAMAGE BY FLOOD AND STORMS IS VAST

Hundreds Homeless When Dike Collapses.

Mississippi River and Tributaries Running Brimful of Turbulent, Muddy Waters That Men- ace Very Large District.

Chicago, April 13.—From the Rocky mountains to the Great Lakes and from the Canadian border al- most down to the gulf of Mexico, the central section of the United States is experiencing one of the most disastrous spring seasons that has been recorded in years.

Damage running into the millions already has resulted and the menace of floods, cold weather and high winds has not yet abated. Serious apprehension still exists that the unfavorable weather conditions will retard the planting of crops to the extent of curtailing the year's out- put of grain and other foodstuffs.

Reports received here today, tell of flood dangers in many sections but particularly throughout Illinois.

Hundreds Homeless.

At Pekin, Illinois, hundreds of persons today are homeless follow- ing the collapse of a dike along the La Marsh drainage district under pressure of high water. Three thousand acres of farm land are in- undated. Refugees are being hous- ed in tent colonies. Reports from Cairo, Illinois, say that the levee protecting East Cape Girardeau and the Clear creek drainage district, including 12,000 acres, is expected to break momentarily. The Missis- sippi river is approaching a flood stage of thirty-seven feet, which would be the highest since 1844.

The Father of Waters and its many tributaries are running brim- ful of turbulent, muddy water that menaces a district of empire-like proportions.

Many towns in Michigan, among them Cheboygan and Onaway, are fighting to stem floods that threat- en serious damage. The Black and Cheboygan rivers in the region of Cheboygan, are swollen by almost incessant rains and are threatening to break through restraining dams. Families in many outlaying sections are marooned and scores have fled from the danger areas. At Onaway, more than 100 men are battling to save a twelve foot ledge, the only link that keeps the Black river with- in bounds.

At Paris, Illinois, George Martin and Ray Omstat, farmers, were drowned when they attempted to ford a swollen stream.

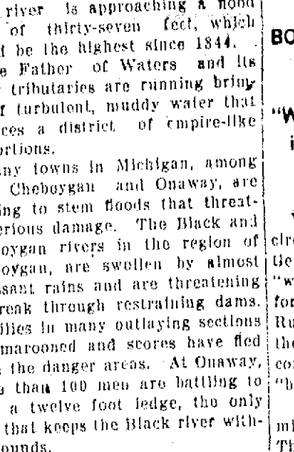
Thirty homes in North LaCrosse, Wisconsin, are surrounded by water, the Fox at Oshkosh is reported ris- ing rapidly and considerable flood damage has resulted in the vicinity of Oconto.

Reports reaching various agencies interested in crop conditions indi- cate that in many sections, the re- cent rains have prevented the sow- ing of oats, spring wheat and plow- ing for corn. This delay in seed- ing will make late crops and in many sections may prevent entirely the successful cultivation of large areas.

Discount Rate Drops.

London, April 13.—The discount rate of the Bank of England today was reduced from 4½ per cent. to four per cent., the lowest since 1914.

HER "WINNING HAND" WINS DIAMOND RING



Miss Mania Seminova, daughter of Sergius Seminova, famous artist, has the most beautiful hands in America, judges in the Los Angeles "pretty- hand" contest decided. She won a ring of diamond clusters.

ALLEGED "WIFE THIEF" HELD AS WOMAN'S SLAYER

Dr. Herbert J. Bryson is held by Huntington, Pennsylvania, police, fol- lowing the slaying there of Mrs. Helen Kirby Haines, whom he is accused of having "stolen" from her legal husband, Bruce E. Haines, of Washing- ton. Mrs. Haines disappeared from the household of her legal hus- band in August, 1920. In Huntington she lived as "Mrs. Bryson," de- spite the fact that her legal husband denies having been divorced. Haines asserts that he will spend his last dollar to prosecute the man "who stole my wife from me!"

LEGION SCORES RUSSIAN CHIEF

Demands Semenoff's Expulsion as Murderer.

BORAH TO ASK THAT GENERAL BE DEPORTED

"Wolf of Siberia" May Appear in Person Before Committee To Answer Accusers.

Washington, April 13.—The net of circumstantial evidence, branding General Gregoire Semenoff the "wolf of Siberia," with responsibility for the slaughter of 100,000 Russians, was tightened today when the American legion joined army commanders in condemning his as a "brutal murderer."

Appearing before the senate com- mittee on education and labor, John Thomas Taylor, legislative agent for the legion, bitterly assailed Semenoff and demanded his deportation. The committee, it was stated by Senator Borah, Republican, of Idaho, will recommend deportation if the charges of barbarity and human bloodshed are upheld against Se- menoff.

It was state today that Semenoff probably will appear in person before the committee to answer his accusers. Now under arrest in New York, Semenoff is technically prevented from leaving that state owing to bail regulations. If the court agrees, it was said, he will appear before the senate committee.

The legion's attack on the "wolf of Siberia" was a result of the pro- test filed before the department of state and the department of labor against his admission to this coun- try. The protests were based on the charge that Semenoff had condoned the slaying of two American soldiers at Posalskaya in Siberia. Captain E. L. Earle, of St. Paul, attached to a British mission to Russia, also was to testify against Semenoff. Earle spent many months traveling through the maritime province where Semenoff's troops held sway. He reported terrible scenes of slaughter and cruelty practiced up- on the civilian populations.

Dramatic Interruption.

Washington, April 13—While the senate labor committee and a room- ful of spectators were listening eagerly today to fresh tales of Gen- eral Gregoire Semenoff's atrocities in Siberia from Major Edward L. Earle, an ex-British officer, of St. Paul, there came a dramatic inter- ruption in the shape of charges by Semenoff's attorney that the wit- ness himself had offered to aid the Cossack leader.

To Resume Storm Signals.

Washington, April 13.—The dis- play of storm and small craft warn- ings on Lakes Superior, Michigan, Huron, St. Clair, Erie and Ontario, will be resumed for the season on April 16, the weather bureau an- nounced yesterday.

NOTED AIRMEN DIE IN CRASH

Sir Ross Smith and Comrade Are Killed.

MACHINE TAKES NOSE DIVE, LANDING ON ROOF

Aviators Plan a World-Girdling Journey from Westminster- on-the-Thames.

London, April 13.—Sir Ross Smith and J. M. Bennett were kill- ed at the Brooklands flying field to- day while testing an aeroplane for a round-the-world flight. Sir Ross Smith was to have started on the globe encircling journey within three weeks. He is one of the best known aviators in Great Britain.

Smith and Bennett had been in the air for fifteen minutes. The machine got into a flat spin and took a nose dive, landing on top of a shed. Smith was killed instantly but Ben- nett lingered for several moments.

Sir Keith Smith, a brother to Sir Ross, saw the accident from the field. He had planned to accompany his brother on the round-the-world flight.

Plan World Journey.

The airmen were using a specially designed Vickers machine which had been previously tested by Cap- tain Cockrill, an aviation expert.

Just before the disaster, it was announced that Sir Ross had plan- ned to begin his world girdling journey from Westminister on the Thames. Spare parts of the machine had already been dispatched to vari- ous cities throughout the world where the airmen hoped to make stops.

Sir Keith Smith was to have ac- companied his brother but was late, arriving on the field two minutes af- ter the machine had landed.

Bennett, a first lieutenant, was substituted for Sir Keith as engi- neer.

Spectators believed that the air- men were making a nose dive to test the strength of the machine. It swooped so suddenly that all were taken by surprise. The impact of the aeroplane shattered it to bits, but there was no fire.

Sir Keith removed his brother's body to the morgue.

The only explanation of today's disaster was bad weather. There was a sharp, gusty wind blowing during the trial flight.

Allows Sale of Stock.

Columbus, April 13.—Authority to issue and sell, at not less than par, $5,281,800 worth of common stock was given yesterday to the Cleveland Electric Illuminating company by the state utilities com- mission. Proceeds are to be used in reimbursing the company's treasury for disbursements in connection with acquisition of property and construction of improvements dur- ing the past five years.

OPPOSITION TO DRY LAW SEEN

Anti-Volsteaders Take Heart as Consequence.

BELIEVE VICTORIES AT POLLS SHOW SENTIMENT

Burke Cockran Sees Pendulum Swinging Back.

"Volsteadism Can Not Contin- ue," He Maintains—Says It Is Based on Theory That Every Citizen of Nation Is Bad.

Washington, April 13.—For the first time since the Anti-Saloon league blew its hot, dry breath across the United States, sweeping everything before it, the small "lib- eral" element in congress seriously believes that the tide of popular favor is turning against the Vol- stead law so strongly that some- thing can soon be done toward modi- fying the law—possibly along the line of light wines and beers.

The Anti-Volsteaders have said before that sentiment was turning against Volsteadism, but they said it as a matter of principle and were not sure of their ground. This time, they sincerely believe it, and their belief is shared by a surprisingly large number of dry congressmen.

Three notable "liberal" victories, scored at the polls this week, have contributed largely to this belief. They are:

First—In the thirty-seventh con- gressional district of New York—Judge Frank Irvine, Democrat, run- ning on a wet platform, came with- in 3,000 votes of being elected to congress over Lewis Henry, Repub- lican, in a district that is normally overwhelmingly Republican.

Second—In the Twelfth congres- sional district of Illinois, Represen- tative Ira Copley, Republican, of Aurora, one of the oldest members of the Illinois delegation, was de- feated in the primaries for renomi- nation by Frank R. Reis, who cam- paigned on a liberalization and tax- ation platform.

Third—In the Sixteenth congres- sional district of Illinois, Represen- tative Clifford Ireland, Republican, of Peoria, was defeated in the pri- maries by William E. Hull, on a straight wet and dry issue.

W. Bourke Corkran, Democrat, of New York, spokesman for the liberal element in congress and whose wet and dry debate with Wil- liam Jennings Bryan at the San Francisco convention made oratori- cal history, was one of those to characterize these political results today as the "turning point."

"It is the awakening," said Repre- sentative Corkran.

"It is indicative of the awakening of the common sense of America, which has been asleep since the pas- sage of this Volstead law.

"Volsteadism can not continue. Sooner or later, the common sense of an imposed upon citizenship is going to assert itself and overturn this legislation dictated by a fana- tical minority.

"Volsteadism is based upon the theory that every one is bad.

"Volsteadism is imposed at a time when the country was not men- tally normal. Even I myself, did not realize just what Volsteadism meant, that things would come to such a pass where drunkenness is increased, where law-breaking, even by reputable citizens, is the accepted. It can not continue. This thing must stop and I believe that this is the turning point."

"Wet Week" in Pittsburgh.

Pittsburgh, Pa., April 13.—Dis- trict Attorney Harry Rowand, of Allegheny county, is giving the old Pennsylvania legal practice a new twist.

Before Volstead got too active, Pennsylvania courts used to sit once a year as "license court" to hear applications for liquor licenses in their respective counties.

License courts in this state still function for the benefit of those who need a permit to sell kickless beer. But the breathless interest in the final decisions of these courts as to whether the applicants got across safely or not with their licenses has died out.

"Wet week" to hear dry cases is to be instituted in this county. Fearful that the term "wet court" instead of "license court" might be treated with levity and irreverance, per- haps, it was decided to substitute the word "week" for "court."

A vast number of offenders against the dry laws are booked for trial.

BOMB DESTROYS BIG TENEMENT

Three Persons Seriously Hurt by Blast.

ROAR OF EXPLOSION HEARD FOR BLOCKS

Outrage Occurs in a Crowded Downtown Section of New York—Scores in Peril.

New York, April 13.—Explosion of two bombs wrecked a five story tenement at No. 218 Eldridge street, early today, injured three persons seriously and threw the district into a mad panic.

Two men were seen running from the place just before the explosions occurred.

Two arrests were made as the re- sult of the round-up and questioning at the Clinton street police station of twenty suspects.

The men described themselves as Rosario Fielli, forty-three, a labor- er, of No. 20 Stanton street, and Gaspare La Blanc, twenty-six, a ten- ant of the wrecked building.

Police believed the explosion was caused by a dynamite bomb but have no possible evidence to support a definite verdict.

Heard for Blocks.

The roar of the explosion, heard for blocks brought thousands into the streets, watched frantic women and children racing along the roof of the building and clinging to fire escapes.

Fire started and proved difficult to fight because the explosions had virtually wrecked the upper floors.

Injuries were miraculously few, only six, all together, receiving treatment. Patrolman Edward Tracy, who was on the scene almost immediately, fought his way to the upper floors being beaten back by the smoke twice, and aided Mrs. Roxilie Semitore and her three in- jured children to crawl to safety on their hands and knees.

Tracy collapsed as a result of breathing the fumes, but recovered and returned to the search. Arriv- ing firemen found sixteen families clinging to fire escapes and begging and wailing for aid. Ladders were run up and children carried down and hurried to the homes of neigh- bors.

Firemen could find no traces of the bombs, when, after a half hour's stiff fight, it was possible to make search. The roof was a sagging mass of ruins, fallen in part and many of the upper rooms were badly wrecked.

To Return to Movies.

New York, April 13.—Roscoe "Fatty" Arbuckle, film star, who has just been acquitted at San Fran- cisco of the murder of Miss Virginia Rappe, beautiful screen favorite, will return to the movies at once, and it is believed that the public will receive him and restore him to his old time popularity, according to a statement made here this after- noon by Joseph Schenck, Arbuckle's manager.

RAILROADS ARE ON UP GRADE

Reports Indicate a Return of Prosperity.

ONLY FIFTY-FIVE ROADS EXHIBIT DEFICITS

Total Net Income for the Month is $47,762,600.

Improvement in Finance Result of Huge Decreases in Opera- ting Expenses — Western Carriers Show Big Gain.

Washington, April 13. — Amer- ican railroads are on the "upgrade" to prosperity, according to reports filed today with the interstate com- merce commission covering operat- ing incomes for February.

With only fifty-five roads showing deficits, the total net income of all carriers for the month was $47,762,- 600, compared to a net deficit of $5,176,800, the same month last year. This income would produce an annual return of 1.67 per cent., the highest actually earned since the war and 1.87 per cent. higher than in January.

The improvement in railroad finances was the result of huge de- creases in operating expenses al- though revenues also showed de- clines. The revenues totalled $401,- 328,700 for the month, a decrease of 1.3 per cent. over the same month of 1921, while the expenses totalled $324,423,800, a decline of 15.6 per cent. over February last year. Despite these decreases, the reports showed fourteen per cent. more freight was handled in February than in the same month of the pre- ceding year.

Roads in the eastern district alone showed more than a six per cent. re- turn on their valuation. In this dis- trict, the net income was $29,535,- 800, or a return of 7.17 per cent., compared to a deficit of $7,627,592 in February, 1921.

In the southern district, the car- riers reported a net operating in- come of $7,045,800, compared to $468,257 the same month last year. This was at a rate of return of 3.98 per cent.

Western Carriers Gain.

Western carriers reported net in- come of $11,177,900 compared to $1,984,400 although this gave them a rate of return of only 2.46 per cent.

The prosperity of the eastern roads compared to the low returns in the western and southern dis- tricts, it was said, was due to coal strike which acted as a stimulus to the shipment of coal.

The commission also was inform- ed that rate reductions in hay and grains had failed to materialize in an expected increase in traffic of these commodities.

The tabulations, it was stated, were based on reports from 200 railroads.

Charge Put on Railroad Body.

Washington, April 13.—The federal railroad administration to- day was charged with responsibility for the $500,000,000 government guarantee paid American railroads in 1920 by Senator Cummins, Re- publican, Iowa, chairman of the sen- ate interstate commerce committee.

Cummins declared that if the rail- road administration had increased rates during its control "as it should have," the guarantee would not have been necessary.

The Iowa senator also condemn- ed the railroad administration for handing the roads back to private control in poor condition.

McAdoo Accused.

Washington, April 13.—William Gibbs McAdoo, former director gen- eral of railroads, today was accused of placing an "enormous and de- structive burden of expenses" upon American railroads during the war by Julius Kruttschnitt, chairman of the Southern Pacific, in testifying before the senate interstate com- merce committee.

Kruttschnitt declared McAdoo and the federal railway administration had ignored the "promises of Presi- dent Wilson" and the "guarantees of congress" in neglecting railroad equipment during his administra- tion.

"McAdoo left to the owners the unpopular task of seeking before the public an increase in revenue to meet this increase in expenses," said Kruttschnitt.

Kruttschnitt said McAdoo had turned back the roads with a mar- gin of "but 6.53 per cent. between operating expenses and earnings compared to 29.52 per cent. when he received them."

He added that out of every dollar

URGES ADHERENCE TO GRISWOLD DEBT LIMIT

Ohio Wesleyan Professor Addresses Kiwanis.

WOULD ABOLISH ONE-PER-CENT. LAW

Claire Wilcox Also Advocates Abolition of Taxes on Stocks and Bonds.

Abolition of the Smith one per cent. law, abolition of taxes on intangible property, such as stocks and bonds, and the strict adherence to the debt limits imposed by the Griswold law, were among the suggestions for the solution of the tax problem given by Claire Wilcox, professor of economics at Ohio Wesleyan university, in an address on "General Property Taxes," at the noon luncheon of the Kiwanis club at the Busy Bee cafeteria today. One of the largest crowds ever present, numbering 106, attended the luncheon.

"The general property tax," said Professor Wilcox, "is the tax which comes nearest to every man. It is the tax from which the money for schools and the building of roads is raised. From it $203,000,000, was raised in 1921. Of this $93,000,000 was used for schools. From 1917 to 1921 the amount raised by the tax increased 100 per cent. In that same period the expenditures for schools increased 230 per cent. in some of the districts. Part of this increase was used in increasing the salaries of teachers and they needed it, and part of it was used in the construction of better buildings. As long as there is better remuneration for the teachers and as long as we build better buildings, we must pay for it.

Scores Tax Evasion.

Professor Wilcox scored the evasion of taxes by under-valuation in tax returns.

"The comparison of records of the transfer of property with the listed value of real estate in Ohio," said Professor Wilcox, "show that property in Ohio is listed at about sixty-seven per cent. although in the constitution of the state of 1851, it was provided that all taxes should be listed at 100 per cent. of the value.

"Personal property constitutes over one-half of the property of the state, but it only pays one-fourth of the taxes. It is estimated that only five per cent. of the personal property is listed. Most of the farm stock is on the tax duplicate. It is rather hard to hide a cow or pig while only about thirty per cent. of the farm implements in the state are listed. A business firm in Franklin county with an annual business turn over of more than $30,000,000 has its stock duplicate at $1,000,000. Another firm reported its stock at $1,000,000 and the county auditor increased it to $5,000,000 and there was no protest, because the actual stock of the company was probable nearer $15,000,000.

SAYS NO CHANGE IS MADE IN SCHEDULE

Member of County Literary Committee Makes Statement.

No change has been made in the schedule for the final debate for the county high-school title tomorrow night according to C. B. Rayburn, superintendent of the Green Camp Centralized school and a member of the county literary committee in charge of the debate.

"No change has been made in the schedule of final debates in the county for Friday night," Mr. Rayburn said this morning." The literary committee has had no meeting since last Saturday when the schedule was arranged and knows nothing about any change. The schedule as arranged provides that the affirmative team from Pleasant go to Martel and the affirmative team from Martel go to Pleasant."

REPORTS DIMOND RING AND POCKETBOOK STOLEN

Taken from Physician's Office This Morning.

Miss Leona Richards, employed as a bookkeeper at the office of Dr. D. W. Brickley, over Martin's furniture store on west Center street, is mourning the loss of a diamond ring and her pocketbook which contained a little more than a dollar, which were stolen from a drawer in the office this morning about 9 o'clock.

Miss Richards received the ring as a present this morning, it being delivered by the mail carrier about 8:15 o'clock. She went to the office of Dr. V. C. Kissel, in the same building, where she opened it and then returned to her own desk She took the ring off and replacing it in the box, put it in a drawer of the desk with her purse She then stepped over to the office of Dr. V. C. Kissel and when she returned three minutes later she found the office door open and also the drawer of her desk. Investigation developed that the ring and her purse were gone. Miss Richards is of the opinion that some person on the landing saw her through the transom when she placed the ring in the drawer. She made a report to the police and an investigation is being made.

SIDNEY BAKER EASY WINNER IN BIKE RACE

Rides Course in Seven Minutes and Forty-Five Seconds.

RALPH HINKLIN FINISHES SECOND

Paul Prettyman Wins Third Award—George McNamara Finishes Fourth.

With a safe lead on his closest competitor Sidney Baker coasted under the wire an easy winner in the two-mile bicycle race held under the auspices of the physical department of the Y. M. C. A. Young Baker, who is fifteen years old, rode the course in seven minutes and forty-five seconds, while Ralph Hinklin, winner of the second award breezed in just three seconds behind him. Paul Prettyman won third award with a time of seven minutes and fifty-three seconds, while George McNamara was given fourth place.

The race was witnessed by a large crowd of enthusiasts along the course and an unusually large number of persons were lined up at the postoffice to see the finish. The boys made a good get-away, with Chief J. W. Thompson as starter, and Mayor Neely judge of the course. The judges were Dr. J. W. McMurray, F. C. Hughs, Ernest Wideman, Earl T. Smart, Charles W. McClain, Harry F. Palmer, E. C. Mackan and Dr. V. C. Kissel. Cecil Clough was clerk of the course.

The awards were first, a tennis racket, from Thibaut & Mautz; second, a cap from Hughs Clothing store, and third, a knitted tie from Kleinmaier's.

Entrants in the race were George McNamara, Lester Brickley, Billy Diebert, Paul Prettyman, Disney Baker, Ralph Hinklin, Eugene Hamilton and George Weber.

Tomorrow's running race will close the series and promises to be one of the features of the series.

TAGGING THE BASES

Five-thumbed performances by members of the so-called "million-dollar infield," helped the Dodgers to take the Giants yesterday. Dave Bancroft and Johnny Rawlings made glaring errors at critical moments Score four to three.

The two Urbans—Faber and Shocker—locked horns in the battle between the White Sox and Browns, the latter winning despite the fact that they got only three hits off Faber. Score three to two.

The Philadelphia Athletics, generally picked to finish last in the American league, got away running at the expense of the Red Sox Helmach, a recruit, stopped the hard-hitting Boston team. Score three to two.

Likewise do the much abused Phillies occupy the first division, though temporarily, perhaps. They beat the Boston Braves, seven to one, with Lee Meadows pecking at Mitchell's young men through his cheaters.

Tris Speaker has reason to congratulate himself on the trade that brought Stuffy McInnis to Cleveland. The erstwhile Bostonian was the big gun in the Indians seven to four victory over the Tigers, driving out a single, double and triple.

Regardless of the fact that three of their stars were out of the game, the St. Louis Cardinals won, going away, from the Pittsburgh Pirates, ten to one.

George Mogridge, once again mutely reproached Miller Huggins for selling him down the river when he pitched the Senators to a six to five victory over the Yanks.

The come-back of Grover Cleveland Alexander, thought to have seen his best days, was the feature of the Cubs seven to three victory over the Reds. Alex the Great was unbeatable until the late innings.

DODGE BROTHERS MOT

My Marriage Problems

Adele Garrison's New Phase of

Revelations of a Wife

Copyright, 1921, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

"The waiter is laying the table in the sitting-room by the fire, Madge. Is there anything I can do to help you dress?"

Dicky was standing in the doorway of the bedroom in the hotel suite Dr. McDermott had secured for us, his face holding the anticipatory complacency which the thought of good food generally brings to masculine features.

I brought myself back from my drowsy dreamland with difficulty and smiled up at Dicky.

"You sound most attractively Dickensesque," I said. "If you could only produce Mr. Micawber to grill a chop or fix something in a saucepan, now."

"You're only talking to gain time getting up," Dicky grinned down at me. "I know you when you're sleepy. But it's no use. Up you get, unless, of course, your head is hurting too bad. If it is, I'll bring your dinner in here."

"My head isn't hurting at all—that is, nothing to speak of," I amended conscientiously, "and I'm not sleepy any more. But, Dicky, what will the waiter think of me looking like this?"

I put a troubled hand up to my forehead, and felt myself flushing a little at the quizzical grin I saw upon Dicky's face.

"Think," he echoed. "There's only one thing possible for him to think, and that is, that you've been up to something which you shouldn't, and that I very properly gave you a husbandly biff on the bean. The waiter will not express any opinion, of course, being a properly-trained gent, but I'll bet a cookie he'll silently applaud me in his heart."

"Oh, Dicky, do stop your nonsense!" I groaned. "For if there's a grain of truth in what you say I won't go in the other room at all."

"What is it Lil always tells you: 'Don't be an anointed idiot just because you know how.'" Dicky's voice held a touch of impatience. "What d'yo think you're going to do during the time you're getting rid of those black and blue spots, go into a nunnery? Can't be done, my dear. You've got to hunt up Katie and get back home, and that all entails being seen in public. I'll grant you that I'd balk on entering the public dining-room of this hotel or any other with you just now, for I'm the ultimate goat in this business, but a dinner in our own rooms like this with just Dr. McDermott and one lone waiter present is something else again. Here are your shoes. Stick out your feet and I'll put them on for you."

I obeyed him, but mechanically, for I was much upset by his reference to himself as "the ultimate goat."

"Dicky," I pleaded, "you don't mean that people will really think—"

"That I gave you some good soul plenty," Dicky asserted with maddening cheerfulness. "Why of course, they will! You ought to know that. All you've got to do is to look at me to see that this is a black eye. But the reputation of being a wife-slugger is pinned on me forever and ever. I don't care so long as it's only hotel waiters and house physicians and people of that sort to whom little affairs of this kind are only incidences of almost daily, or, rather, hourly occurrence. But if ever the boys heard about it I'd never hear the last of it. Most of 'em wouldn't really believe it, but they'd pretend to, all right, and existence would be just one hectic little slice of purgatory until they got a chance to get some other fellow's goat. Don't you dare let any of the Durkees see you until your map is all straight again. I can imagine what old Alf would do to me if he had get a glimpse of you now."

The jealousy which always lurks in my heart at any reference, no matter how remote, to Edith Fairfax, leaped up, flaming unreasonably, irresponsibly.

"You needn't worry," I said childishly. "I'll not be apt to go near the Durkees, or shame you with any of their relatives by my awful appearance."

For a tremulous, remorseful second, I thought I had made my husband furiously angry. He scowled blackly, and muttered something under his breath. Then he looked down at me for a long second, threw back his head and laughed heartily.

"You little idiot!" he said, pulling me to my feet, and slipping an arm around my shoulders. "What you need is another black eye to match the one you have, and to take some of the nonsense out of you. Hurry up now and get into whatever clothes you want to wear for supper before I decide to take the same as well as the name."

Dandruffy Heads Become Hairless

If you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.

HEALTH BOARD ORDERS ARREST OF DOCTOR

Fails To Report a Contagious Case Charge.

Philadelphia, April 13.—Legal procedure against Dr. H. G. Thatcher, this city, for failing to report promptly a case of laryngeal diphtheria which proved fatal to Alexis Dupont, twelve-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Dupont, socially prominent, is to be asked by health officers here.

Investigation by a medical inspector showed the boy had been subjected to Christian Science treatment for two days prior to his admission to the municipal hospital here. He died three hours later on Sunday.

Board of health officials yesterday ordered Dr. Thatcher be arrested on a charge of violating an act of assembly which requires contagious diseases be reported to the health bureau within forty-eight hours after the attending physician makes a diagnosis.

The Duponts are related to the Wilmington, Delaware, family of that name.

It is an open question which bothers the household the most—what she shall wear or how he can pay for it.

YOUNG WIFE OF AGED MAN CRUEL CHARGE

Attorney Says She Hastens His Death.

Washington, April 13.—Charges that Mrs. Cecile—Ready—Oyster, beautiful young widow of George E. Oyster, millionaire Washington dairy man, hastened the death of her aged husband by "repeated acts of cruelty," were filed in court here yesterday by Edward C. Brandenberg, executor of the Oyster estate.

Mrs. Oyster is contesting the will of her late husband. Their marriage a few years ago when she was twenty-three and he was seventy-two, was one of the social sensations of the capital.

CLEVELAND OPENS THE SEASON WITH VICTORY

Detroit Tigers Defeated by a Seven-to-Four Score.

Cleveland, April 13. — Cleveland opened the season with a 7-to-4 victory over Detroit, Morton outpitching Oldham and Olsen. Cleveland bunched its hits, McInnis, playing his first game as an Indian, leading with a single, double and a triple. Veach of Detroit hit a home run with one on base. Cold weather held the attendance down.

ARBUCKLE FREED BY JURY ON THIRD TRIAL

Fat Comedian's Luck Stays with Him.

San Francisco, April 13.—The jury in the third trial of Roscoe C. Arbuckle on a manslaughter charge growing out of the death of Miss Virginia Rappe, motion picture actress, returned a verdict of acquittal after a few minutes' deliberation.

Arbuckle was deeply affected. He received the verdict with a great sigh of relief. There was no demonstration, the court having warned against it. Mrs. Minta Durfee Arbuckle, the actor's wife, cried quietly. Both she and Arbuckle shook hands with the jurors. Edward Brown, whose presence on the jury was objected to by the prosecution, was foreman. The verdict was by acclamation.

Arbuckle's Plans.

San Francisco, April 13.—"I hold no animosity against any man. I want to get back to work in my life profession. I hope to come back. Pictures are dear to me. They are my life work. I have no plans just now. I could not make any until this cloud was lifted. I will consult with my friends within the next few days." Such was the future outlook of Roscoe "Fatty" Arbuckle, film comedian, who, on his third trial, for manslaughter, was freed of the charge by a jury of eight men and four women after only a minute's deliberation.

BRITAIN READY TO BEGIN DEBT PARLEY

Informs State Department of Fact.

Washington, April 13.—Great Britain has informed the state department that she is ready to begin immediate negotiations looking toward the refunding of the $11,000,000,000 allied debts to the United States. The other debtor nations will not cause any delay in the negotiations. Assurances to this effect already have been received from France, Belgium and Italy, it was said. Great Britain's commission is expected to arrive here within a month, closely followed by the representatives of the other nations.

Great Britain already has served notice on France that she expects payment of all the French-British obligations. Much of the $4,000,000,000 loaned by the United States to Great Britain was reloaned to other countries. Great Britain already has promised to resume her interest payments in October.

FEW AMERICAN SHIPS NOW BEING BUILT

Rapid Decline Shown in Yards; England Far Ahead.

New York, April 13.—American shipyards are now building 136,800 gross tons of shipping, 8,000 tons less than were in the yards on July 1, 1914, said a statement issued by Lloyd's. World shipbuilding in general is rapidly reverting to the pre-war scale, the statement continues, with Great Britain reporting 500,000 more work in hand than in the pre-war period. A decrease of 40 per cent in work in hand has been reported for American yards in the past three months, and in April, 1919, the United States yards were building 4,186,000 tons, or more than the rest of the world's yards combined.

For Congressman-at-Large.

Chicago, April 13.—Congressman Richard Yates and Henry R. Rathbone were nominated in the primary to make the race for congressmen-at-large on the Republican ticket in this state, according to available returns. Steven A. Day was chosen to the vacancy that exists in congress from this state through the death of William Mason.

Banking Blast Furnaces?

Youngstown, O., April 13.—Reports received here from New Castle, Pa., said that the Carnegie Steel company is banking the three blast furnaces which have been operating in its plant there. The reports could not be confirmed from any official source. Banking the blast furnaces, which is said to be due to lack of fuel supply, would mean closing of the Bessemer plant and the bar mills at New Castle either at once or in a very short time.

Police Use Tear Gas.

Detroit, April 13.—Tear gas, used for the first time by Detroit police, ended a six-hour siege of a second floor apartment in Charlotte street and eventually forced five men and two women, wanted in connection with the murder at Nankin, Mich., March 21, 1921, of William Anderson, a member of the state police, to surrender.

To Cut Fire and Police Forces.

Youngstown, O., April 13.—With the approval of the chamber of commerce, Mayor George L. Gies announced that he would lay off within 10 days all members of the police and fire departments except 25 in each department. There are 135 police and about 80 firemen at present. The city has no money to pay salaries.

My Marriage Problems

Adele Garrison's New Phase of

Revelations of a Wife

Copyright, 1921, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

Dicky's rough nonsense with its suppressed note of displeasure—suppressed, I knew, because of my injury—effectually extinguished my little blaze of childish temper and gave me a desire to make amends to my husband for my churlishness. I twisted swiftly around in his arms and put my palms on either side of his face.

"I'm sorry, Dicky," I said humbly. "I didn't mean to be horrid, but—"

His first answer was a tightening of his arms about me, a roughly tender kiss. Then he stared at me a bit curiously.

"Sometimes in the course of the next hundred years or so," he said, with more than a touch of exasperation in his voice, "I'm going to take a month or two off, and find out just what's in the back of your bean concerning poor old Ede, that you froth at the mouth every time there's a remark concerning anybody or anything in the same county with her. No, you needn't try to wriggle away. I'm not going to put you through any inquisition now. I'm just registering a threat or a promise, whichever way you mean to view it, for future use. Is this the gown you want to put on?"

His manner decisively dismissed Edith Fairfax from our conversational horizon, and I was glad enough to pick up his cue.

"As it is the only dress I have with me, it is Hobson's choice," I returned airily. "And I don't need you now, dear. My head is better, and it would be absurd for me to fuss over my toilet with this awful eye. Do go out and talk to Dr. McDermott, and I'll follow in just a few minutes."

"Well—all right," Dicky assented reluctantly. "But call me if you want anything."

"Oh, surely," I returned, hoping that Dicky would not notice my feverish eagerness to get him out of the room.

For the revelation that he had given me concerning his knowledge of my antipathy to Edith Fairfax had shaken me deeply. I wondered if he had spoken as he had because of my little outburst, or if his odd little speech was the result of long and keen observation and deduction on his part, of my reactions toward Edith's name and presence. I shrank from the latter hypothesis fearfully. It was as if I had suddenly discovered myself to have been under the scalpel of a vivisectionist.

I pulled myself together sharply as the rather thin tones of the little physician came to my ears. It was almost time for the supper to be served. I must not let Dicky suspect that my nervous outburst over Edith Fairfax had affected me beyond the moment.

It was but the work of two or three minutes for me to arrange my hair so as to cover my discolored forehead as much as possible, and slip on my gown. My mirror told me so and a story, however, that I dreaded to enter the sitting-room and encounter even the friendly eyes of Dicky and Dr. McDermott.

I need not have feared, however. They rose perfunctorily when I entered, and the physician made his conventional professional inquiries. Then they returned as eager schoolboys might do to the animated conversation in which they had been engaged when I entered, and which I soon discovered to be composed wholly of active service reminiscences.

I might as well have been back in Sag Harbor for any attention they paid to me, a fact for which I was sure to another when they have a very grateful. Of course, I never omitted the preliminary courtesies which to men like them are rather actions rather than things controlled ones, but beyond that I do not think either man had any real knowledge of the presence at the table. It was "Don you see?" and "Do you remember?" and "Were you at—" and all the other public had been given in the war dispatches. But here, in confidential talk with the little physician—himself as I guessed, a veteran with heroic field and hospital service to his credit—Dicky had dropped the barriers, and was unwittingly revealing a record which made me glow and thrill with wifely pride.

It was like listening to a saga of the old Norse warriors. I thought as the evening wore on, and I found myself unconsciously falling into an worship fully humble an attitude toward my husband as any wife of that long ago time and clime could have held.

Something of this feeling I tried to express to Dicky when at last the supper was over, and Dr. McDermott had bidden us farewell. But the spell had been broken, and my husband's only reply was an irritable:

"For the love of Mike, Madge, don't you try any of that hero stuff on me! Glad you enjoyed the children if you like that sort of thing, but nothing doing on any hero-worship talky-talk now."

The two best places in town to eat at home and at Rider's Cafeteria. If you don't believe it, try us.—Adv. 113-3-6

Sun and Wind Bring Out Ugly Spots. How to Remove Easily.

Here's a chance, Miss Freckle-face, to try a remedy for freckles with the guarantee of a reliable concern that it will not cost you a penny unless it removes the freckles; while if it does give you a clear complexion the expense is trifling.

Simply get an ounce of Othine—double strength—from any druggist and a few applications should show you how easy it is to rid yourself of the homely freckles and get a beautiful complexion. Rarely is more than one ounce needed for the worst case.

Be sure to ask the druggist for the double strength Othine as this strength is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.—Adv.

DRUGS EXCITE YOUR KIDNEYS, USE SALTS

If your Back hurts or Bladder bothers, drink lots of water.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; can not injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which every one should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.—Adv.

Has Powerful Influence Over Rheumatism

Druggists Guarantee First Pint Bottle of Allenrhu to Show the Way to Complete Recovery.

Mr. James H. Allen, of Congress avenue, Rochester, N. Y., suffered for years with rheumatism. Many times this terrible disease left him helpless and unable to work.

He finally decided, after years of fruitless study, that no one can be free from rheumatism until the accumulated impurities, commonly called uric acid deposits, are dissolved in the joints and muscles and excreted from the body.

With this idea in mind he consulted specialists, made experiments and finally compounded a prescription that quickly and completely banished every pain and symptom of rheumatism from his system.

He first gave his discovery, which he named ALLENRHU, to others, and found, with what might be called marvelous success. After years of waiting he decided to let sufferers everywhere know about his discovery through the newspapers and druggists to guarantee it as above stated. H. & Company can supply you.—Adv.

GRAY HAIR BECOMES DARK AND BEAUTIFUL

Try Grandmother's Old Favorite Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Nearly everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle of this old time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients at very little cost. Everybody likes this preparation now, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after one or two more applications it becomes beautifully dark and glossy and you look years younger.—Advt.

WOULD MAKE FARMS ATTRACTIVE TO YOUTH

Farm Bureau Federation Head Discusses Problems.

DECRIES TENDENCY TOWARD RENTING

Says Hope of Transient Farmer Is To Get Enough Ahead To Move to Town.

[Editor's Note.—J. R. Howard is president of the American Farm Bureau federation, an organization of American rural dwellers, of progressive, thinking farmers.]

[BY J. R. HOWARD.]

Here and there a hilltop eighty has worn out and lies beneath the sun indifferent to the seeds in its keeping, to the hungry who tramp over it. Hills that never failed the buffalo for nobody knows how many thousand years are gray with the exhaustion of extensive production.

So long as the sod was unbroken the fertility of the soil remained intact. The pioneers who broke the seal found the soil richer than creation. For under the unhampered government of Mother Nature all plants give back their surplus at the end of every summer. The first wheat field waxed golden on the legacy of the frugal prairie grass. The first corn fields spent riotously the compounded interest of centuries of the earth's careful savings of plant food. And the farmers fed their crops on the soil's store for so many years before it became noticeable that the principle was being touched, that the supply was unconsciously supposed to be inexhaustible. We sowed intensively, reaped bounteously, and then burned the straw and stubble complacently. So long as the virgin qualities of the soil, under a system of wasteful soil mining, supported a relatively spare population we were not worried about the future. And now many an anemic field dots the countryside in mute reproach.

There Is No Waste.

Fortunately, however, farmers are awakening to the fact that soil must be revitalized. Public opinion forbids the burning of straw. Legumes have been put to making hay and nitrogen. Fertilizer companies are doing business. Phosphate and limestone deposits are being distributed. The hilltop eighties are being rejuvenated. Just as the land has been devitalized, here and there a farm community has worn out. The church door has been nailed shut. The school house is out of date. The children of the old homestead have moved to town and the farms are now the abodes of transient families who hope to get enough ahead to move to town also.

No nation has ever risen above the level of its agriculture and the dead communities scattered through the United States are comparable to the white alkali patches on the hilltop eighty. And if allowed to spread will ruin our country just as sure as blight will wipe out an apple orchard.

The worst of it is that the worn out community is not necessarily the one where the land is past production. If that were the case the building up of the soil would bring a flow of new blood back into the personnel of the occupants. It is often in our richest sections that the human force of agricultural production is at low ebb.

We are used to thinking when we speak of agricultural production, of grain and livestock, cotton and wool, lumber and fruit. But the open country has an important product in boys and girls who constantly feed our cities.

Related History.

This history of the pulseless community is well known. The pioneer father who thrust his plow into the unbroken prairies was as vital as his acres. He had come to the new country to make a home. His neighbors were home builders. The noninterference of outside world, need for protection and common ideals, fostered social contact. They were the best type of humanity, being the kind who were not contented to be poor in the state or the foreign country from which they came. Since they were in their new homes to stay they set about making their communities fit places in which to live. They built school houses and churches at the same time they broke the sod and put up barns. The next generation took up community building at the point left off by their parents. The old homestead was kept in the family, all members of which started out equally. If anything, the boy whose lot it was to stay home and run the farm was considered to be a bit better off than the boys who had studied pedagogy or medicine, or letters. Fortune had not overtaken the pioneer people yet, but they reasoned that it was a new country, and the future was promising.

About three generations away from the pioneers the real exodus begins. A little visiting back and forth with the members of the family who had cast their lot in the cities and towns makes the children wonder if the lot of the brother to remain on the family homestead is the one to be cherished.

And by this time there is a little less hope for the future. Three or four generations of unfulfillment is not very conducive to the virility of hope. The old homestead is rented to a class of people not quite progressive enough to get away. The community immediately loses much of its stability. There is no community pride for these people except to move again in a year or so and naturally do not feel responsibility in their temporary arrangement. And where the profits of the land must be shared between two families, the landlords and the tenants, there is nothing left to devote to the ideal community center. The taxpayers live away from the land and are therefore not personally and subjectively interested in the church, schools and social phase of their neighborhood. There is such a constant shifting of residents that organization is difficult. There are no social allurements and ties and as soon as a member rises above the level of his environment he goes to the city where more is promised him, even if it is not always given.

In the meantime the descendants of the first farmers have either lost out in the demands of city life and are finding their mess of pottage as day laborers, or they have prospered and forgotten the farm from which they received their birthright. And most of them do prosper. It has been said that ninety-four per cent. of the leading citizens of one of our large eastern cities were brought up on a farm. Of a group of 100 representative men, commercial and professional, in Chicago, I found that eighty-five per cent came from the country. More than sixty per cent. of the men and women listed in "Who's Who" are likewise from the country.

The successful ones return to the country and build palatial homes and estates and constitute the highly educated landlord class. Is the country slowly deferentiating into this and the propertyless laboring classes? If America becomes the home of landowners and peasants we still will have failed our Pilgrim fathers miserably and inexcusably.

A Good Example.

I have not been discussing the United States on an average. I have chosen the wornout community and the wornout farm as signals of danger abroad. Like we sometimes go through the barrel and pick out certain apples.

There is no doubt but that the root of the evil is the prevailing economic injustices dealt the farming industry. The farmers themselves are the ones who will have to change this system. They can not all walk off and leave it. Moving to town may solve the problems and better the finances of the individual but toil will be taken later on a national basis.

The farmers who deny their children the emancipation of liberal education likewise drain the fertility of the neighborhood. The physical labor is returned with the personal interest in the individual farm; the wheat is usually properly stacked, and the hogs well housed. But these are the farmers who ride the plow in disgruntled objection to the world market conditions with which they are unfitted to combat. Their vision is as narrow as their lanes. They are the farmers whose blind refusal to join in cooperative marketing, believe in the farm bureau, and be independent in politics, holds back rural progress. By the hardest work and the closest saving they usually manage to get more or less ahead financially, but they do not go about it in the way that benefits the whole community, and there is no margin in their profits for better community conditions. And when silos make proud the landscape while house and church and school squat apologetically in their shadows there is no real wealth.

If sending our young folks away to be educated does not gain us anything in our own communities; if ignoring the possibilities of education is dangerous, it must be the system of education that is at fault.

To Retain Color.

I would not strike from the readers the romance and the glamour of the other worlds, but I would include stories which throw a little color around the farmers' lives. I would include in the geographies studied in the country schools a bit more of agricultural detail. I should like to see the beginner trace through the copy book some such sentence as, "I am proud to be a farmer," or "United we farmers stand, divided we fall." I would bring the high schools within home distance of every country boy and girl. I would put rural sociology in every freshman course and continue the study throughout the four years. I would have our agricultural colleges teach marketing as well as production, reaping as well as sowing.

I wish that there might be instilled in the minds of all country boys and girls a feling of responsibility for the farm—a feeling that no matter what work they might take up they owed a return to their country community in service—that they were not free from obligation until they had paid back to country life the interest on the capital they took—that the members of the family who go out to be lawyers and doctors and merchants and bankers realize that they were indebted for their success to the training and strength and ideals they received from their rural environment and that even if they are temperamentally and naturally unsuited to take the lot of the man who stays behind to feed the rest, they have a debt of honor to pay the one who does, and that to the soil and the community they must give back. The tree takes food and sap from the ground in the spring, gives service to the world in the summer, and then in the autumn drops every leaf back to the earth.

Exide BATTERIES

Bright Lights on the Farm

Out on the prairie, in New England valleys, on lonely mountain sides, thousands of farm homes, churches, schools, and stores are now electrically lighted by the current from Exide Batteries. A large majority of all small electric light and power plants on farms and on yachts are equipped with Exide—the long-life battery.

You use an Exide Battery daily—every time you telephone it is the current from an Exide that sends your voice over the wire. Submarines are propelled under the sea, as are mine locomotives below the ground and street trucks and electric passenger cars on the ground, by Exide Batteries.

Exide was the pioneer battery in automobiles as well as in the other fields where batteries are used. The result is a starting and lighting battery of long-lasting power—a matter of real comfort and economy to you in motoring.

When you require a new battery, or repairs on any make of battery, we hope for an opportunity to show you the calibre of Exide service.

Another woman has been acquitted of murder, but you didn't read much about her trial in St. Louis because she killed her father.

We see they have been wearing Panama hats and Palm Beach suits in Washington. They do a lot of things in Washington without consulting us out here.

Smoke up! The Dominican republic is expected to raise 25,000,000 pounds of tobacco this year as compared with about 10,000,000 pounds last year.

Reformers must save something, or they won't be able to save themselves. The saloon is gone, to be sure, but we still have the bootlegger and tobacco and jazz.

Now, we're to have the camera that photographs noises; in other words, we suppose, it's designed to lend tone to the coloring.

An aerial freight line, the crew of which is to receive orders by radio much like trainmen now receive them from telegraphers, may be established through Marion far more quickly than most people imagine.

A sound-absorbing mouthpiece for the telephones has been invented that gives almost the privacy of a booth. It's too bad that some sort of silencer can not be found for the human phonograph.

Determining by a popular vote of the people whether the girls attending rural high school at Vinland, Kansas, shall be required to wear skirts extending at least three inches below the knees, appears to be going to the extreme in another way.

John Hays Hammond says the world is not nearly so bad off as it was three years ago, and he is right beyond all question, but the trouble is there are so many people who can not be made to believe it.

"Why is it," asks the Columbus Dispatch, "that the treating custom has never become so general at the soda fountain as it used to be at the bar?" Possibly owing to the fact that soda warms neither the head nor the heart like booze.

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle is a clever Britisher. He told New York reporters that marriage in the "hereafter" was altogether a matter of "affinity" or "union of souls." It would seem that we've had enough of "soul mates," "love duels" and the like down here, judging from the papers, but, if Sir Conan Doyle is right, we're not going to get any relief either in this world or the next.

AFTER 100 YEARS; STILL REMEMBERED.

April 12 marked the one hundredth birthday of Donald Grant Mitchell, American author, who was best known under the pseudonym of "Ik Marvel."

Not to many will the name of this author be familiar after the lapse of many years, but Donald Grant Mitchell, nevertheless, was one of the leading writers of his day, writing on various themes. Of all his numerous works his "Reveries of a Bachelor," perhaps, is the best known and most widely read.

Mitchell's books carry with them their author's warm sympathetic touch, genial charm and ease of style that make them worth-while reading.

MOST COMPLETE SYSTEM.

When he talks of how industry has been organized the average individual has in mind little more than the manufacturing, transportation and mining industries. He seldom thinks of the need of organizing the farming industry nor of the extent to which this has been accomplished. The city dweller whose acquaintance with agriculture is established largely through farm products on his dining-room table has little knowledge of the extent to which our department of agriculture serves the farming interests of the nation.

An important feature of the department's work is the gathering of crop reports from all parts of the country. Aside from innumerable trained officials scattered all over the country, there are 220,000 crop reporters located in all parts of the United States, whose activities are supervised and checked up by field agents and trained statisticians.

The monthly reports gathered in this fashion cover acreage, condition, yield, total production, stocks on farms, progress on farm work, wages, supply or deficiency of farm labor, fertilizers and seeds. Reports are made for about sixty crops, which represent about ninety-five per cent. of the total agricultural production in the United States.

There is a touch of the romantic in the dissemination of this news from Washington. Obviously it must be given out to all parts of the country at the same time. Advance information would serve the interests of speculation. On the evening before crop report day all telephones to the department are disconnected. The next morning all doors are locked and guards see to it that no one enters or leaves the building while the crop-reporting board is in session. Then at exactly 2:15 in the afternoon the telegraph wires into virtually every city and town in the United States are singing with the message of crop conditions.

The tremendous importance of this work is little recognized by the average individual. It is little known, too, how much patience and ingenuity were required to bring it to its present state of perfection. For most of us it is sufficient to know that at the last meeting of the general assembly of the International Institute of Agriculture at Rome, to which came delegates from all over the world, it was freely conceded that we have developed the most complete and accurate system of agricultural statistics ever devised.

There's nothing unusual about a flare-up in April; it's not so windy as March, but still, usually, it is pretty windy.

Well, Margot Asquith is happy back in England again. She came to the United States for publicity, and she got it in plenty.

BEAUTIFUL THOUGHT FOR THE DAY.

Easter comes at a glad season of the year. The festival itself, is both commemorative of the resurrection of Jesus Christ and as a memorial to the atonement wrought by the death of the Master upon the cross.

It is hailed with great acclaim in all the Christian churches of the world. In Greek and Latin and in the languages derived from them, Easter was known as "Pascha," "Pasch," "Pasqua," "Pascua," "Paques," etc., from the Chaldee word, "Pascha," the equivalent of the Hebrew "Pesach." The "Destroying Angel's" act is recalled by the last name in "passing over" the households of the Hebrews when he smote the Egyptians, as disclosed in the twelfth chapter of Exodus.

This year Easter will fall on April 16. The way by which Easter is determined is that of the first Sunday after the paschal full moon—the fourteenth day of the calendar moon, or the full moon which happens upon or next after March 21; and if the full moon happens on a Sunday, then Easter day is the first Sunday following.

As usual, Marion churches will observe Easter with elaborate programs. It is an event that the children and the grown-ups have learned to look forward to with much pleasurable anticipation; it is an event all should remember with some beautiful thought for the day.

RECLAIMING "A BARREN WASTE."

We know that Marion, as a municipality, has not much money to spend save for what is absolutely necessary, perhaps, but, at the same time, we believe that it would be a good investment to beautify the old City hall site.

There it is—a "barren waste" in the heart of the city! It is not much better in looks than it was when the old City building stood there in its dilapidated condition, with its ancient architecture of odd formation and design, but, with the expenditure of just a little money by the city, it could be made to look infinitely better.

Situated at Church and Prospect streets, with two churches and a gas filling station at opposite corners, the future City hall site could be converted into a breathing spot this summer that would be greatly appreciated by many citizens and at the same time made into a beauty spot.

Shrubbery, vines, flowers and grassy plots, with a graveled walk or two, would effect the transformation.

A background for vines and other creeping greenery and flowers could be erected to the north and east lines of the site, with park benches conveniently arranged within.

Why not a little breathing spot like that downtown? It would rest the eyes as well as the body. And the cost would be trifling.

RILEY'S HOOSIER SHRINE.

James Whitcomb Riley's old home in Indianapolis is to become a shrine. It has been taken over by the James Whitcomb Riley Home association. It is to be preserved as a memorial to "The Hoosier Poet."

While critics may differ as to Riley's ability as a poet, his verses in Indiana dialect made him famous because they were unique in literature. It was a far cry from itinerant sign painter and composer of warrant verse to a position as editorial writer on the staff of the old Indianapolis Journal, but the leap was made by Riley. And it was while he was thus employed that he wrote "Leonainie" and perpetrated it on an unsuspecting public as one of the lost poems of Edgar Allan Poe. That hoax really made Riley.

Riley found millions of readers while he lived. His popularity has not waned since his death. He will live as one of the popular literateurs of his time.

LIFE'S VAUDEVILLE.

[By Dr. James Ball Naylor.]

NEVER TOO LATE TO MEND.

I have just met with an article in Collier's that interests me very much, and I'm going to make free use of it—quoting and commenting.

"Yesterday," writes a well-known editor, "I was put into a quandary by a letter from my daughter at college. It was about her allowance. She said she was trying to be economical and didn't want me to lose faith in her."

In this letter to her father, the daughter confessed:

"I am afraid I haven't a great deal of will power; but, perhaps, twenty-one isn't too late to try to correct it. Is it?"

There is hope, great hope, for this young woman.

She is studying herself—learning about herself—becoming cognizant of her strengths and her weaknesses.

As to will power—some persons naturally have much will power; others, just as naturally, have little will power.

Persons naturally having strong will power are apt to become opinative and self-willed; and may go wrong through unwillingness to receive and act upon advice.

Persons naturally having weak will power are prone to be dependent; and may go wrong from too readily responding to the suggestions of others.

However, in a large sense, we are the architects of our own fortunes; the fashioners of our own fates.

We are self made, to an extent; and always in the making.

So it's never too late to mend—to make over.

Improvement is possible.

Reform is not impossible.

We can change the blue prints.

We can revise the plans and specifications.

And we have it to do—every day, almost, if we are to make ourselves what we should be, worth while.

The editor who received the letter from his daughter said in reply:

"My daughter, twenty-one is not too late, any more than thirty is too late, or forty, or sixty. Your problem is my problem. It is the daily problem of every human being. Every day of my life I have to face it.

"This very day I wasted two hours, doing trivial things, because I could not command the will to go at the more important thing that was hanging over me and calling for action.

"So you see, if a sympathetic understanding will help you, I have it**.

"You are old enough now to have the truth disclosed to you, to have this more intimate acquaintanceship. It may help you as you go through the world, because very few people will give you an honest, close view of what they truly are. The human animal is skilful in hiding. Each one lives really in a separate cell or cave, from which he scarcely ever issues in his native form."

And all that's true—eternally, everlastingly true!

We're hermit souls.

We seldom reveal our real selves.

We parade our strengths—we hide our weaknesses.

May God's help be for us all!

We need it!

IN THE WORLD OF THE RADIO

PRECAUTIONS NEEDED AGAINT FIRE HAZARD

Fire underwriters are advising insurance brokers throughout the country that because of the increased fire hazard that has been developed with the sale of radio receiving mediums on a large scale, special attention should be paid by inspectors to insulations in buildings where such apparatus has been installed.

Where the aerial is within the building the hazard is considered to be reasonably well safeguarded, and inspection by the board of underwriters is not necessary.

Induced charges of electricity in outdoor aerial wires, however, due to lightning discharges, are likely to enter houses, and unless suitable and sufficient precautions have been taken fire will follow.

J. C. Forsyth, chief inspector of New York board of fire underwriters, says that fires from this source have been very few in New York, there having been only forty-four during the last ten years. With the great increase of installation of fire apparatus he says that insurance writers are anticipating a larger increase.

Precautions urged upon amateurs are to properly insulate and ground all wires and to install a two-way switch and lightning arrester outside of the house.

The two-way switch is to safeguard the building should the owner forget to throw the connection of the aerial to the ground when operations are suspended.

MONTRAVILLE WOOD DEVOTES PART OF TALK HERE LAST NIGHT ON PHASES OF THE RADIO

Montraville Wood appearing last evening at the Central Junior High school auditorium in the last number of the Harding High school lecture course demonstrated a number of new inventions in the field of electricity and the gyroscope. The lecture was very well attended, nearly every seat being taken. Professor Wood has an entertaining manner and his lecture was sprinkled with a great deal of wit and humorous stories.

The first part of his talk was on radio. He described a number of new devices which he said should simplify the wireless and make it easier to handle. He expressed the belief that some day a man down town should be able to stick a small iron rod into the ground, raise his umbrella, and with a set carried in his pocket talk to his wife at home. He showed a small instrument which he claimed placed on the heart of a sick man at sea and attached to a radio would make the man's heart beats audible at a hospital in Philadelphia.

He showed the action of what he called cold light, light without heat. This was caused by a current with a very high voltage which charged a metal knob. If a vacuum tube containing certain substances was placed near the knob a distinct light came from the substance. Different substances gave off a different light. Particularly interesting was the action of a rare gas found in the air, called neon. This gas is so sensitive that an electric generator within many miles can be detected by its influence on the gas. Professor Wood explained how this was used in the war to find submarines.

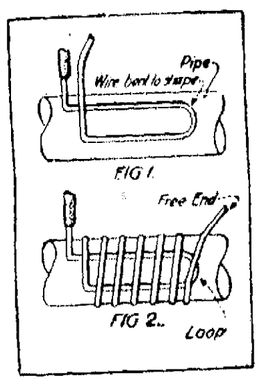
The latter part of his lecture was given over to the explanation of his extremely sensitive sound wave recorder and to the gyroscope. The sound-wave recorder is a small instrument made as nearly like the human ear as possible. With the use of this instrument attached to an electric circuit by merely saying "light" or "dark" he was able to turn the lights on or off.

The work of the gyroscope in connection with aeroplanes and the stabilizing of ships he explained fully. He demonstrated how ungovernable it is unless one knows the secret of handling it. When a large one was placed spinning on edge his whole weight was not enough to force it over on its side or turn it from its plane of rotation. A car balanced on a single wire and equipped with a gyroscope was sent out over the heads of the audience without falling off. He told several stories of adventures with train porters when he had a gyroscope going at a great rate of speed in a suit case.

GOOD CONNECTION WITH GROUND VITAL FACTOR

One of the essentials of an efficient station is a good ground connection. Ground connections may be made to either a gas pipe, a radiator, a water pipe, or all three. Since the gas and radiator connections may not provide a continuous path to the ground, the water pipe ground is preferred. The ground lead wire should be as short as possible.

Here is a handy method of making a ground connection when a ground clamp is not available.



A piece of insulated bell wire long enough to reach to the instruments from the connection is first "skinned," that is, scraped clean of all insulation, and carefully cleaned with fine sandpaper for a length of about three feet. The pipe is filed and scraped clean with emery cloth for a distance of several inches, and tinned if the connection is to be soldered.

The bared portion of the wire is then arranged on the prepared section of the pipe as shown in the accompanying diagram. The wire is tightly wound, beginning at point "A," for several inches, and the free end is passed through the loop at "B." This will draw the loop and the end up tightly against the rest of the winding and prevent the winding from loosening. The connection may be soldered with a blow torch and wire solder.

Where soldering is not practicable the connection can be wrapped with several layers of tin foil covered with friction tape. The tin foil and tape should extend beyond the ends of the winding. This treatment will insure a moisture proof joint and prevent oxidation and consequent bad contact.

BY THE EDITOR

Radio has brought with it a golden opportunity for the inventor. Millions are waiting for the man who can solve any one of the many problems that are present today.

Take the problem of static electricity, for instance. Try as we may, no one has yet brought forth a simple and cheap service that will eliminate this nuisance.

A better loud speaker is needed, and there is a fortune waiting for the man who can produce it.

We need a cheaper detecting and amplifying device—something that will replace the vacuum tube.

We need more accurate tuning instruments for both receiving and transmitting equipment. Interference must be tolerated until sharper tuning is possible.

The high, cumbersome radio towers must go and with them the massive machinery now necessary for long-distance transmission. Better radio telephone modulating systems must be brought forth.

Hundreds of problems must be solved. Millions are to be made. Inventors, yet busy! Fortune is ready to slap you on the back.

RADIO DICTIONARY

Watch This Column Every Day. It Will Help You Understand the Terms Used in Radio.

DETECTOR, MAGNETO—One of the early detectors invented by Marconi. Its operation was based upon an electro-magnetic principle. Not sensitive enough for modern use.

DETECTOR, GALENA—A crystal detector made especially for use with galena. Galena detectors are usually of the "catwhisker" type since a light contact with the crystal is a necessity. In the case of silicon, a comparatively heavy contact with the crystal is necessary.

DETECTOR, VACUUM TUBE—Detecting device which depends upon the rectifying effect that an ionized space has upon a current of radio frequency.

D. C. GENERATOR—An electric generator producing direct current.

ELECTRIC OSCILLATIONS—Alternating currents of high frequency which are used in radio.

ELECTROMAGNETIC WAVES—Electromagnetic waves are more often called wireless waves. They are electromagnetic disturbances traveling through the ether. The waves in the ether are similar to the waves in a pond of water. They have a definite length and they travel in all directions from the point of disturbance. Electromagnetic waves travel 186,000 miles a second. The wave length does not influence the speed.

FARAD—The unit of electrical capacity. An electrical condenser is able to hold a certain definite amount of electricity. This capacity is measured in farads. The term is taken from the name of Faraday, who was one of the world's greatest scientists.

FARAD, MICRO—One millionth of a farad. A condenser with a capacity of one farad would be of enormous size. Therefore the capacity of small condensers is measured in microfarads.

FADING SIGNALS—The fading in strength of signals is due to atmospheric changes. The power of the transmitting station does not vary when the fading of signals is pronounced.

RADIO FLASHES

The more experienced and amateur radio operator you are, and particularly the more frequently you use your set in the parlor where polished floors and expensive furniture abound, the closer you should keep a bottle of ammonia solution and an old cloth. This is particularly so if you see a storage battery that has a wooden case since acid is practically certain to be splashed over the sides and soak into the case and run down upon the table or floor. Under such circumstances a quick application of ammonia or baking soda solution will neutralize the acid and prevent stains upon the woodwork. According to reports received from a prominent manufacturer there is little excuse in these days of advanced battery construction for using radio "A" batteries that have wooden cases. A number of manufacturers are supplying batteries in rubber containers.

It was once quite a problem for mothers to keep their boys off the street. Now they look on the roofs for them.

For use across the secondary of a tuner, such as the honeycomb coils, use a condenser of twenty-three plates or less. The less capacity used in the secondary circuit the better the set will work.

In making a regenerative set employing two variometers and a variocoupler be careful not to get the instruments too close together. If they do the set will howl. A set of this type should be mounted on a box not less than sixteen inches long.

Despite all advice to the contrary, people still insist on using dry cells for the filament supply of vacuum tubes. The batteries will hold up for about five minutes and then they will slowly die down, until nothing at all can be heard.

If after wiring up a set you hear nothing but a steady hum in the receivers you may be very sure that there is an open circuit somewhere. Trace out the wiring carefully and some little fault will present itself.

The so-called "spaghetti" tubing, if placed over bare wire used in wiring a set will improve the appearance 100 per cent, and reduce the danger of short circuits.

Remember that seventy-five ohm receivers as they are used in ordinary line telephone work, are entirely unsuited for radio work. Of course, some will work, but most of them will not. Get a pair of 2,000 ohm receivers and be sure of results.

The latest achievement in radio telephony is apparatus by which one station on shore can maintain a two-way conversation with each of three ships all at the same time. This may develop into a system of radio telephony exchanges, which will make several transatlantic connections at the same time.

To keep messages secret, a special apparatus is being developed which distorts the speech before it is transmitted. Corresponding apparatus at the point intended gets the message.

NOTICE TO NON RESIDENT DEFENDANT.

Glenn Beckley, whose place of residence is unknown but whose last known place of residence and postoffice address is Salesville, Maryland, is hereby notified that the undersigned this 15th day of March, 1922, filed in the Court of Common Pleas, of Marion County, Ohio, Case No. 17038, a petition praying for divorce from him upon the ground of gross neglect and that said cause will be heard after April 27, 1922.

ALICE JAMES BECKLEY.
98-Th-6

It was just getting daylight when I let Jubilee down and went out with the pail to milk the crankiest brutes. The sky was clear and there were a few stars left in it, and there was a warm wind an it was almost like I could smell things starting to grow. And when I came out of the barn with the milk the sun was just coming up, and there was not any clouds and the kitchen door was open and my mother was working around the stove, and she said to me that she wondered if us two could not make a garden. I told her my grandfather could make a garden, only every time he found a worm he would want to go fishing. Then she laughed and said maybe he would dig until he found a whole can of worms.

When I came out after breakfast Skunk's little brother was by the back door, and he said that Skunk told him that we had a horse and some cows, and he asked me if I had any hay, and I told him we had some, and he asked me if I would give him some to make some nests with and I asted him if he had some bantties and he said he didn't. He said he wanted to make some nests for the Easter rabbits to lay eggs in. The poor little bugger! I gave him an armful of hay and when he asted me if I thought the rabbits would lay him some eggs, and I told him that on Easter rabbits laid more eggs than roosters, and he went away with an armful of hay he could not see over, and left me there laughing. I would hate to be so ignorant.

"And I told him that on Easter rabbits laid more eggs than roosters, and he went away with an armful of hay he could not see over, and left me there laughing."

My unkle came out while I was standing there and asted me if we had a left-handed munky wrench, and I told him we did not have any kind, but I would go over and ast Mr. Farrel if he had one, and I did, and Mr. Farrel said he didn't, but his brother who lived about a mile away used to have one, but I thanked him and told him I had to go to school. I asted my unkle what he wanted it for and he said he thought that maybe he could make the jiggers go on his plow, or some such thing, but I got so blue as me for not having one everything is.

After school we all went down to the lake to see what was on the water coming in. There is not any ice in the lake and we were wondering if it was warm enough to go in swimming. I took off my clothes and jumped in as far as the middle, but it is quite cold yet, so I put on my clothes again. I would hate to be a fish. Younies asted me today if I was going to make any nests for the rabbits to lay in. She thinks rabbits lay eggs. Girls are not very brite, but it doesn't matter if they are not brite when they are pretty. Maggie, the man that got fascinated on her leg, is in hard luck. And it is awful to not be brite and to look like Mosey Galwaltz. If I believed rabbits laid eggs I would make some nests, but I know better, but we have got plenty of hay. My grandfather was telling about Spring in the war time, so I got to set up to hear him tie a little while.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—Vaguely conscious of a double personality, but without any idea of its meaning, the girl, Leonora, makes her accustomed way into the Street of Strange Faces. Thoroughly at home in the underworld of New York, Leonora takes her course to her appointed rendezvous. Greatly in love, and seeing the fine qualities which the girl really possesses, Mario seeks to turn her from the path of inevitable destruction, but only in a half measure accomplishes his purpose. At Rubicon's cafe, gathering place of criminals, Leonora meets her partner, "Red" Carnehan, and his associates, and in accordance with his advice, for the purpose of betraying a fellow criminal to the police. She savagely defends herself, and the existing argument is interrupted by the appearance of Leo Bielinsky, fleeing from the police, one of whom he has killed. Officers in pursuit crash into the room and two are killed by Carnehan. Leonora and the rest escape.

CHAPTER TWO

The Antagonists.

I. PRISCILLA.

Rousing on an elbow, Priscilla Maine found herself awake, with a racing heart, a throat swollen with a strangled cry of horror, and a mind through whose painted murk the reflection of a woman's screams ran like a thread of purple light.

Yet here was only darkness, with silence absolute . . .

With a low gasp of relief that was half a sob of fright as well, she sprang up from the divan, stumbled to the wall, and after a moment's groping flooded the studio with milky radiance from an inverted dome. And in a passion of gratitude she embraced the reassurance inherent in the atmosphere of that richly furnished, spacious and silent studio, her father's workshop till his death and ever since her own.

It was true, then: she was safely restored to her own intimate environment, where nothing resembled even remotely that frowsy room where murders had been done. She had merely dreamed a dream, one more of those amazingly real dreams which she had learned to accept without protest as phenomena of slumber unavoidable, singularly harmless, and on the whole rather amusing.

So at least they seemed till this night when, for the first time, stark tragedy had stalked unbidden and unheralded, reveling with ruthless hands the flimsy texture of illusion and rendering the dream more fact to her than this awakening, more true, and so much the more terrible.

Pressing palms to temples that throbbed and burned intolerably with their content of thoughts acrawl with fright and horror, she made her way to the bathroom and bathed her face with cold water, then with cologne till, in the sensory reaction of stimulated flesh and nerves, she began to feel measurably more calm and self-possessed, more Priscilla Maine than "Leonora" . . .

A twittering telephone recalled her to the studio. Receiver to ear, she said, "Yes? Who is it?" and heard the agitated cries of the elderly kinswoman whom she called aunt and with whom she had her home.

"Priscilla! Where have you been all evening? I've been half frantic . . . Why didn't you let me know?"

"I haven't been anywhere, dear—only asleep, here in the studio. Please don't be cross, Aunt Esther; I didn't go to do it, honest I didn't! Mrs. Morey left in the middle of the afternoon—she had a tea on, or something—and about half after five I stopped painting and thought I'd lie down and rest a little before coming home."

"Do hurry, I'll send Arthur with the car at once."

"Please."

She donned hat and cloak before a mirror in whose insusceptible depths she saw, set in her own hat and individual coiffure, the face of the girl whom in her dreams she knew as Leonora; and yet it was likewise the face of Priscilla Maine. Vainly with importunate eyes she questioned that counterfeit of two countenances. How could this thing be? Was she one woman waking and another when she slept? Was there in her a dual personality such as reading had taught her to accept as a psychological possibility? Did two natures struggle within her, one prevailing in her hours of slumber, and not always even then?

That train of speculation she was afraid to pursue too far . . .

II. THE PORTRAIT

Beside the mirror, a long pier glass, stood a heavy studio easel holding a full-length canvas, an unfinished portrait of herself in the Zingara dress she had once worn at a costume dance. Begun long ago, on a day when a model failed her, and carried out inconsistently, "when she felt in the mood," the painting now neared completion; a little more work on draperies and background and it would be ready for exhibition. Inspecting it critically, with fault-finding eyes, she saw that her work was good, almost as good as her father's. The figure on the canvas lived; its striking pose was instinct with almost insolent vitality; the face was aglow with zest in life, the eyes seemed transiently arrested in an instant of gay impudence altogether charming.

Her troubled gaze turned back to the mirror's faithful presentment of a slender, modishly gowned young worldling, the finished product of a fashionable upbringing, a little proud, reserved, thoughtful, exquisite . . . Priscilla Maine.

But the girl on the canvas was Leonora. And in her self both lived. But which was which? Which false, which true? Was the life she knew, the life of Park avenue and Fifth, of teas, dinners, theaters, dances—relieved only by these days in the studio, her happiest, when she was painting—was this life reality or illusion? And that dream life of which she caught only fugitive glimpses, fascinating, tantalizing, terrible, and related to nothing within the scope of her experience—was the dream life perhaps the life of fact?

She shook a head baffled, bewildered and faint with wondering.

The doorbell interrupted. She answered, finding as she had expected that the chauffeur was waiting to escort her to the town car which he was obliged to leave at the mouth of the alley. She was glad of his company, when she had put out the lights and locked the studio door, for the alley was indifferently illuminated and seemed rather grimly desolate at that hour. She knew a moment of sympathy with Aunt Esther's distrustful animosity toward "that dreadful studio life."

If Aunt Esther only guessed how infinitely more dreadful that other life which Priscilla knew in dreams . . .

But no one guessed. Instinctive reticence, jealousy of her privacy, reluctance to be thought different, and fear of having her sanity questioned as she herself too often questioned it, had guarded the girl's secret and kept it inviolate.

She had long since made up her mind she must never marry while this dream life continued to exert its occult influence upon her. To risk transmitting to her children a mental taint or lesion was unthinkable.

Now of a sudden she remembered the man Mario (or was he merely a shadow?) and in a poignant turn of reminiscence recalled his luminous and compelling eyes, the potent magnetism of his presence, and felt anew the pressure of his lips on hers.

On hers? Or Leonora's?

She cringed low in the corner of the seat, as if fearful lest curious eyes detect the waves of color that burned her cheeks. For in the memory of that kiss she found a sweetness ineffably precious. And in the knowledge that his love was dedicated to that other Self, Priscilla suffered the first bitter pangs of that torment which spares not body, mind or soul, and which is jealousy.

But how should she be jealous of Leonora, if Leonora were herself?

Was it to be her fate to love one shape of dream and hate another?

III. PHILIP FOSDICK.

About three in the morning, finding she could not sleep, she slipped into a dressing gown, and went to her desk, where for two hours she wrote steadily, setting forth in minute detail, as memory served, every item, incident and circumstance of her dream. Thus she found temporary distraction and ease of mind. Unaware of weariness till she had written the last word, immediately that was penned she found herself heavy with drowsiness so urgent it would hardly wait for her head to find its pillow.

Toward noon she awoke and rang for her maid. A pleasant languor tempted to indolence. She adored breakfasting in bed, and did so today with a relish somehow sharpened by a mischievous sense of playing truant, of cheating life's inordinate demands.

Recollection of the dream recurred tardily and sluggishly, like the images that reluctantly take shape on an underexposed photographic film, and when sharpest and most definite seemed pale and unimportant in that warm flood of sunlight which bathed her bed chamber, as little worthy of consideration as a wraith of nightmare. But it served to pique her curiosity and, when she had bathed, she took back to bed what she had written in the night and read it with care and, toward the close, something like resuscitation of those emotions which she had known during the dream itself as well as after waking up. In the end she was aware of an imperative need for enlightenment. The thing had grown too serious, was figuring too largely in her life; if its influence was not to prove altogether ill, she must have comprehension of its nature to give her heart courage.

In all the world she knew but one person in whom she could conceive it possible to repose such confidences . . .

She took the telephone from the bedside stand.

Merely to hear that low-pitched, agreeable voice with its ineradicable tinge of humor was comforting. Her clouded countenance was lighted up by a smile of gratitude—and of affection, too.

"Philip, dear! Do you know I haven't seen you for ages?"

"That's brazen blague, Priscilla. It's your own fault; you will insist on drenching the springtime of your life with turpentine and varnish, overlooking the most important things entirely."

"What do you consider the most important thing in life? Yourself?"

"No; you. And next to you, letting me make love to you."

"But, Philip, you do it so poorly, you're so professional; you transfix me with the penetrating eye of diagnosis and prescribe: 'Love me!'—for all the world as if love were bread pills or distilled water in a bottle labeled 'Shake well before using!' And I really don't feel run down enough . . ."

"I see. You want love slipped over on you . . . like bribing the cook to put a philtre in your coffee."

She laughed delightedly. "That's it, Philip! Subtlety does it."

"Thanks for the tip. I'm making a note of it. So don't be surprised if you wake up one fine morning and find yourself madly in love with me."

"I won't be; and I wouldn't even mind—"

"Priscilla!"

"But I'm not now. So don't lose your head."

"Why not, when my heart—?"

"Please! I called up to ask a very serious question."

"Shoot."

"What's a psycho-analyst, Philip?"

"Well, I'm one—a cross between a quack and a confidence man."

"I know; but what do you do when you're duly functioning as such?"

"You mean, how do I make a living?"

"No—only what do you do to make people pay fat fees."

"Why, I pry into their souls, if they happen to have any, and ferret out all their secrets—those they purposely try to keep from me, and those they themselves don't know anything about."

"I see . . . Philip, will you do me a favor; psycho-analyze me?"

"What's the good? I did that long ago."

"Really, Philip?" Misgivings put a tremor into her voice. "What did you find out?"

"That you're the dearest, sweetest—"

"No—please! I'm in earnest. I think I've got a buried secret, and I want you to exhume it and see what it's made of."

"Are you serious?"

"Desperately."

"Mm . . . What are you doing this afternoon?"

"Having you to tea, if you can come."

"I'll come whether I can or not. But what about Aunt Esther? We can't have a third present if we're to talk confidences."

"Let's have tea at the studio."

"Same objection; Ada Moyer—"

"I'll get rid of her somehow."

"Right-o! The studio. What time? Four?"

"Please. I'll be waiting."

Have You a Cough?

Here's How to Get Rid of the Cough and Rebuild the Body.

Wheelersburg, Ohio—"My wife had pneumonia about six years ago and it left her with a dreadful cough. At night she would cough until she was exhausted. She could get no rest or sleep. Her stomach was so bad that she could not retain food. She went down in flesh until she was merely skin and bones. I had tried many doctors and medicines but still she grew worse. At last a neighbor who had relied upon Dr. Pierce's medicines for years, told me about Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and before she had taken all of the first bottle she began to improve. By the time she had the third bottle taken her cough had entirely stopped. She gained in flesh and weighed twenty-nine pounds more than before she took the 'Discovery.'"—Edw. Pinson.

Go at once to your neighborhood drug store and get the 'Discovery' in tablets or liquid and you'll be surprised at the way you'll pick up.—Adv.

GARIS' BEDTIME STORIES

UNCLE WIGGILY IN THE FOG.

[BY HOWARD R. GARIS.]

[Copyright 1922, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.]

"Don't be late now, Uncle Wiggily! Please don't be late!" called Nurse Jane Fuzzy Wuzzy one morning, as the bunny rabbit gentleman started to hop away from his hollow stump bungalow.

"Where do you think I'm going, Nurse Jane?" asked Mr. Longears, with a funny little twinkle of his pink nose. "Perhaps you have an idea that I'm going to school, and that if I do not get there on time the lady mouse teacher will keep me in."

"Oh, no!" laughed Nurse Jane. "It wasn't that. I know you aren't going to the hollow stump school. What I meant was don't be late for supper this evening. I'm going to have a sassafras short cake, and—"

"Say no more!" cried jolly Uncle Wiggily. "Sassafras short cake! I'll never be late when you have that for supper! I fancy I can smell it now!" and he sniffed hungry like, with his pink, twinkling nose. "I'll be here, Nurse Jane, if I have to get on the back of Mr. Slow Poke, the mud turtle gentleman, and have him bring me here in his taxicab!" laughed the bunny.

"Well, see that you aren't late!" cautioned Nurse Jane. And then bunny gentleman hopped away to have an adventure, and Nurse Jane went into the kitchen of the hollow stump bungalow to make the sassafras shortcake.

"Let me see now," said Mr. Longears to himself, as he skipped through the woods. "Shall I go to the right or to the left to find an adventure? And I wonder what sort of adventure I am going to have? I'd like to meet my friend, the white tailed deer, again."

But there was no deer to be seen, though Uncle Wiggily did meet a robin redbreast, who was flitting about in the tree tops.

"Cheer up! Cheer up! Cheer up!" sang Robin.

"I am very cheerful, if you please," answered Uncle Wiggily. "And are you cheerful?

"I certainly am," whistled the bird. "My wife and I are building a nest, and soon we will have some little birds to teach to fly."

"That will be fine," agreed Uncle Wiggily. "Sometimes I wish I had wings, so I could fly."

"And when cold days come I wish I had warm fur, like you," sang the robin. "But, after all, feathers are best for birds, and swift running legs for rabbits. And if I were you, Uncle Wiggily, I'd start and run back home now, as fast as you can go."

"Why?" asked the bunny. "From your perch, high in the tree, do you see the Fuzzy Fox or the Woozie Wolf coming?"

"No, neither of them," answered Mr. Red Breast. "But a thick, white misty fog is blowing up from the marshy swamp, and if you don't start home now you may be lost in the fog."

"Thank you. I'll hop home at once," said the bunny.

Away hopped the bunny, but he had not gone very far before, all of a sudden, the white mist came rolling up from the marsh, and soon

"Cheer up!" sang Robin.

Uncle Wiggily was compassed about by a white fog, through which he could only see a little way in any direction.

"Dear me!" exclaimed the rabbit uncle. "This is quite dreadful! I wonder which way I ought to hop to get home? I suppose I'll go to the left."

He hopped a few steps that way, but, all of a sudden, he bumped his pink nose against a rough tree, which he couldn't see on account of the fog.

"This is the wrong way!" sighed Uncle Wiggily, softly rubbing his sore nose with his paw. "I must hop to the right."

He had not gone far that way before, all of a sudden, he felt his long ears getting tangled in some wild grape vine.

"This will never do!" cried the bunny. "I'll be caught like the deer! I guess I'd better go straight ahead." He did that for a little way, but soon the fog was thicker than ever. He couldn't see where he was going and tumbled down into a hole.

"Oh, dear! I'm all turned around! I'm lost! I can't find the path to my bungalow! I can't see through this fog!" cried poor Uncle Wiggily. He was just going to call for help, but he was afraid the Wolf or Fox might hear him, when, all of a sudden, the bunny smelled something.

"Sassafras shortcake! That's what I smell!" exclaimed the bunny. "And the smell is coming right from behind me! It must be Nurse Jane's sassafras short cake that I smell! If I can't see my way back to my bungalow I can smell my way back! Hurray! I'm all right!"

Turning around, Uncle Wiggily followed his pink nose, always turning in the direction where the smell of sassafras shortcake was strongest. And in a short time, though he could hardly see at all because of the fog, the bunny reached his bungalow, just in time for supper.

"Oh, it was very lucky you told me you were going to have sassafras shortcake!" laughed Mr. Longears, as he sat down to eat. "The good smell led me home!" And he and Nurse Jane were very happy.

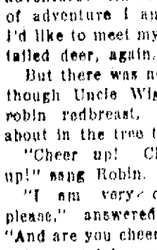
DOES LAUNDRY WORK AND HOUSEWORK TOO

Surprised to Find Herself Feeling So Well

Taunton, Mass.—"I used to have pains in my back and legs so badly, with other troubles that women sometimes have, that my doctor ordered me to stay in bed a week in every month. It didn't do me much good, so one day after talking with a friend who took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for about the same troubles I had, I thought I would try it also.



I find that I can work in the laundry all through the time and do my housework, too. Last month I was so surprised at myself to be up and around and feeling so good while before I used to feel completely lifeless. I have told some of the girls who work with me and have such troubles to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I tell them how it has helped me. You can use my testimonial for the good of others."—Mrs. BLANCHE SILVIA, 59 Grant St., Taunton, Mass.

It's the same story—one friend telling another of the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

KEEP LOOKING YOUNG

It's Easy—If You Know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets.

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do this you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle. Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent. of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, are gentle in their action yet always effective. They bring about that natural buoyancy which all should enjoy by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are known by their olive color. 15c and 30c.—Adv.

One Shampoo Proves

How the action of Palm and Olive oils transforms your hair

It is interesting to watch the transformation in the appearance of your hair when you shampoo with Palmolive. To discover how glossy and soft it becomes, how fluffy without dryness.

Notice how thoroughly Palmolive cleanses your scalp from all dirt, oil and dandruff. This is the secret of healthy hair. And healthy hair means beauty.

A blend of Palm and Olive oils

The softening effects of olive oil are responsible for the gloss and softness. It produces a mild, penetrating lather which softens and relaxes the scalp and enters each root and hair cell.

The accumulations of dirt and oil are thoroughly removed, not only from the surface but from the tissue of the scalp. Dandruff is penetrated and removed.

Palm oil contributes richness and body to this lather and makes it lasting. Both oils have been famous since Cleopatra's day for their softening, relaxing qualities which no others possess in the same degree.

Prevents dandruff

Dandruff, which doctors call seborrhea and say causes most hair troubles, is not removed by most shampoos.

The dry, oily scales are impervious to usual cleansing. It only makes them more powdery and flaky so that many people think shampooing makes dandruff worse.

But they must be got rid of some way, if you want to keep your hair. Dandruff packs around the roots and interferes with nutrition. This makes even the normal secretion found on every scalp, dangerous to hair health.

The softening, penetrating lather produced by the blending of palm and olive oils loosens the scales, dislodges them from the scalp. The delicate organism of each hair is free for healthy activity.

Broken Out Skin and Itching Eczema Helped Over Night.

For unsightly skin eruptions, such as blotches on face, neck, arms or body, you do not have to wait for relief from torture or embarrassment, declares a noted skin specialist. Apply a little Mentho-Sulphur and improvement shows next day.

Because of its germ destroying properties, nothing has ever been found to take the place of this sulphur preparation. The moment you apply it healing begins. Only those who have had unsightly skin troubles can know the delight this Mentho-Sulphur brings. Even fiery, itching eczema is dried right up.

Get a small jar from any good druggist and use it like cold cream.—Adv.
